WHAT IS CHLORODYNE?—Chlorodyne is a word that was coined by Dr. J. Collis Browne, M.R.C.S.L. (Ex-army Medical Staff), to denote a new principle or remedial agent discovered by him, and nowhere described in medical works or Pharmacopœias.

Chlorodyne is a liquid taken in drops according to age. It invariably relieves pain of whatever kind; creates a calm refreshing sleep; allays irritation of the nervous system when all other remedies fail; leaving no bad effects like opium or laudanum, and can be taken when none other can be tolerated. Its value in saving life in infancy is not easily estimated; a few drops will subdue the irritation of teething, prevent and arrest convulsions, cure whooping cough, spasms, and flatus at once.

Among invalids it allays the pain of neuralgia, rheumatism, gout, &c. It soothes the weary achings of consumption, relieves the soreness of the chest, cough and expectoration; and cures all chest affections, such as asthma, bronchitis, palpitation, &c. It checks diarrhœa, alvine discharges, or spasms, and colics of the intestines, &c.

ALBION TAILORING COMPANY.—SPECIAL NOTICE.—The proprietors of this establishment beg to return their sincere thanks for the liberal patronage they have received during the short time since its commencement. They have much pleasure in informing their numerous friends that, in consequence of their extended business, they find it necessary that one of the proprietors should take the entire management.

Arrangements have been made with Mr. WALTER SMITH (late Smith and Curtiss) for this purpose, who will remove from his premises, 281, George-street, next door to the Albion Tailoring Company, on 1st of July next.

In making this announcement, the proprietors are satisfied that they need scarcely re-assert their attention to adhere to the prospectus originally issued, as the long established reputation of Mr. W. Smith is a sufficient guarantee that in quality, price, and workmanship, this establishment will be second to none of the first firms in Europe.

In reference to the above advertisement, Walter Smith (late Smith and Curtiss), offers his most sincere acknowledgments to the gentlemen of New South Wales and the surrounding colonies, for their long continued support, and begs to intimate that his business will be united to the Albion Tailoring Company on the 1st July next.

The rapidly increasing business of this company renders it necessary that one of the proprietors should be constantly in attendance and take the management. The extensive increase of the business fully justifies the expectations of the company in offering the most superior articles at prices hitherto not attempted.

W. Smith confidently solicits the continued support of his patrons and their friends, pledging himself that in elegance of style, superiority of workmanship, and quality of material, this emporium will be unrivalled in the Australian colonies.

W. SMITH (late Smith and Curtiss).

TWO BUTCHERS met the other day,
And near the Market place were quartered,
When one of them was heard to say
By Jove, my friend, we both are slaughtered.
That PHIL M'CARROLL sells so cheap,
He almost gives away his meat;
At all his shops it's quite a sight,
They're crowded morning, noon, and night!
They pass our very shops and doors
And go to PHIL'S by scores and scores.
Look at his price list here below,
And I should like indeed to know
How any man in all the land
With PHIL M'CARROLL can make a stand.
There's not a butcher in the town
But PHIL M'CARROLL will knock him down
In their prices.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, JULY 16, 1864.

THE correspondence in reference to the remarks of Sir ALFRED STEPHEN in our issue of yesterday, would be read with astonishment were we not accustomed to see our Judges accused and condemned in the newspapers and in Parliament, for their judicial opinions. Not indeed that there is any legal process by which this can be done. They have not the advantage which criminals commonly enjoy, of having their offence stated with distinctness, of knowing the character and antecedents of their accusers, and of having the benefit of those tests by which the import of words is ascertained and truth eliminated from assertion. Without exactly approving, we are certainly not inclined to reproach the adoption of the only method of vindication which seems to be open. In any country where "baiting a Judge" had not been the pastime and pleasure of lawyers and legislators, we should feel that the Bench lost something of its dignity and authority by stooping to such unequal controversy. But we presume this must be taken as one of the symptoms of our special character. By a delicate circumlocution the slaveholders of America describe the sale of their own daughters to any ruffian who may attend an auction as their "peculiar institution." We must consider the insult of the Bench—the ribald travesty of its charges and judgments—the fierce and virulent denunciation of its members, as the "peculiar institution" of New South Wales—that by which we shall be distinctively known in the world as our cousins of the Atlantic are by their little "notion."

We have been endeavouring to recall to our recollection the course of our reading for the last few years, and we are not aware that any examples can be furnished from England or her colonies of such habitual and insolent perversion of the statement of the Court, or of the conduct of the Judges.

This is the more remarkable because it would be difficult to find three men who have shown so long and so distinctly their title to public esteem. The reputation of Sir ALFRED STEPHEN as a lawyer is well known and recognised by the profession. His fidelity in the administration of justice has been witnessed among us for twenty years. Throughout the whole course of his public life no man can point his finger to a single instance where he has given even a colourable pretence to assail his purity as a Judge. And who—except the lowest and worst of mankind—would dare to impute to either of the Puisne Judges the perversion of justice?

As these are really the substantial and prevailing views of the colony at large it is certainly to be deplored that several times in the course of the year the conduct of the Supreme Court should be made a matter of arrogant and mendacious imputations,—such as no one believes for a moment, and none tolerate but that too numerous class to whom "the baiting of a Judge" has just as much charm as the acquittal of a bushranger. In other and more healthy conditions of society such persons are put down. The law, where they overstep its license, interposes to their just punishment. Where the law disdains to interfere society is silent, and the members of the Bench regard their assailants with dignified contempt. Shall we not some day see the same spirit prevail?

In this instance it seems that the Judge has been represented as speaking in commendation of the Press of this country, "as pure and upright as in any nation in the world!" He is said to have vindicated the unbounded censures of this Press as being perfectly justifiable, because "There have been Judges upon the Bench who have disgraced the high office by the most corrupt conduct and the most heartless tyranny and cruelty." All this it appears is pure invention—pegs to suspend a slander on. Does it require any proof that no Judge could assert the right of the Press to deliver any opinions with respect to the conduct of the Judges, as affecting their personal character, any more than other men? If indeed an imputation, really deserved, be cast upon a Judge which would place him in the category implied, the man who should have the boldness to say so, would be deserving of the public gratitude; but can it be understood that a Judge is to be assailed in his seat as a corrupt, cruel, and tyrannical Judge, and his opinions and judgments exposed to detraction, misrepresentation, and perversion by every newspaper as a daily pastime?—that it is to be one of the conditions of his office that he will patiently suffer any one who may happen to command a press—whatever be his character, even though just released from penal infliction—to employ any language he may think proper in denouncing the character of a Judge, because some Judges have been corrupt and some tyrannical. In general all attacks upon persons holding the judicial office are mischievous to society. Wherever they are justified from the character of the Judge his removal should be the object avowed as the just punishment of his high crimes and misdemeanors. But surely it never requires to be shown that the office of the Press is abused when the respect due to the judicial functions is in any way forgotten—when opinions are canvassed in the language of accusation, when dissent is expressed in tones of insult, and when the personal character and integrity of so high a magistrate is made the jest and song of the profligate and brutal. If these things are tolerated, society is far more injured than the Judge. The administration of justice must suffer by his degradation, and the Government that stands by and permits it is culpable as an accomplice with a most shameful and mischievous conspiracy to deprive the people of the greatest of blessings—an upright administration of the law.

The Press has a right to offer its comments upon the public conduct and character of all. One exception, perhaps—and that is not absolute—is in the person of the SOVEREIGN, whose exemption is amply compensated by the responsibility of her Ministers.

But this right must be strictly regulated, like all other powers, or it will grow into an intolerable tyranny. It is monstrous that such people as we see in command of a press should be permitted day after day to insult the administration of justice; not less so because it is true that the great mass of society treat their censures with derision and disdain, and hold them as the mere stock-in-trade of a base speculation. There are limits, however, to this contemptuous indulgence. It is first the duty of the Government to interfere; and in default of this the Judges are armed with power to vindicate their own Courts from whatever would lower their authority, or prevent the due performance of their functions. The position of a jury is very different—although it entitles those who fill the office to a fair consideration. It is not to be assumed that the verdict is corruptly given, however opposed it may seem to the evidence; but it is within the province of the Press to point out the force of that evidence, and the conclusion to which it ought to have arrived, and to dwell with vigour on the mischievous effects of that misconception of duty to which jurors as well as all others are liable. If, however, departing from this limit, men who have given their verdict with the presumption that they have done so conscientiously, were to be singled out and held up to public hatred, society would be injured in their persons, and the functions of jurors would, upon the whole, be performed less efficiently than where protected by public opinion. It is one great advantage of trial by jury that it takes men unprejudiced for the most part to decide a question of fact, with the assistance of the most learned in law, and that when they have discharged their office they return among and are lost amidst the people. A Judge is always before the public, and his character is the property of the people; not to vilify and degrade, but to honour and guard.

IN a recent number of Good Words is an account of a new invention which may not improbably come into use in Australia. It is a machine for coal-getting. It has been in course of invention for some years, and references to it may have been occasionally noticed in English newspapers. But it has now been so far brought to perfection as to be not only more efficient but more economical than hand labour.

There are many workmen who, while they acknowledge the utility of machinery in general, cannot conquer their dislike of particular new inventions, especially if the first effect of them seems to be to displace labourers who may have been trained to a particular calling. But the temporary injury thus done by any invention is always rapidly compensated, and then more than compensated by the benefit conferred. For one man that is thrown out of employment by a machine two men are before long found with employment through its instrumentality.

The new coal-getter is not likely to diminish employment, but rather to multiply it, though under a modified form. In every respect it promises to be a clear gain to the miners. It will relieve him from some of the most laborious and exhaustive part of his work, and set him free from the chief danger to which his toil is exposed. The gain in this respect is greater in England than it would be in this colony. Most of the seams of coal worked in the mother-country are comparatively thin, and the workman has to labour in a crouching and confined position, that necessitates a larger expenditure of labour than would be required to do the same work in a freer posture, and that renders the workman very liable to injury from the fall of the superincumbent mass. Twenty per cent. of the accidents that happen in English coal mines are said to arise from this cause alone. To remove the workman out of the way of this danger is no slight advantage, and if the machine had no other recommendation this alone ought to induce the miners to assist in every way in its introduction to general use. In this colony the seams worked in our mines are sufficiently thick to enable the men to stand to their work if they like, and the risk of accident is small if proper precautions are used, so that in this particular respect the machine would not show to so much advantage here.

Another point in which its utility as benefiting the workman will be more marked in the mother country than in these colonies, is in the service it renders in cooling the temperature and improving the ventilation of the mines. All our coal mines are very shallow, the temperature is not oppressive, and the ventilation is easily managed by a furnace. But in the mother country the coal is fetched up from a great depth. Some of the mines are unpleasantly warm and are by no means easy to ventilate. The new coal-getter is worked by means of compressed air. The air is compressed by the engine above ground, and passed down into the mine by pipes. The process of compression develops heat; the converse process of expansion when the air is liberated at each stroke of the machine develops cold, and this refrigerated atmosphere is supplied precisely at the point where it is most useful, viz., in the heading where the men are at work. The air, too, besides being cool has the additional advantage of being pure, for it has not like the ordinary ventilating draught traversed all the corridors of the mine, but has been brought down all the way in a pipe and is discharged uncontaminated where the workmen want it to breathe. This is a luxury which the ordinary system of ventilation could not possibly supply, and is of great importance to the health of the miner.

All successful machines effect a great economy of labour. The patent coal-getter is no exception to this rule. It has been brought to its present efficiency at the West Ardsley Colliery in Yorkshire, and it has been found there that in a weekly get of eighteen hundred tons a week from a seam three feet three inches thick there has been a saving of twenty-seven men at pick work. Nor is this the only economy, for there is a saving of material by the diminution of the quantity of spoilt coal. In the West Ardsley seam, the saving on this account is reckoned to be equal to a shilling a ton on the whole yield of the coal bed. In the Helton colliery it has been reckoned to be equal to ninepence a ton. Such a gain will soon repay the cost of the machines, where there is a large yield. Whatever diminishes the cost of production is a gain, first to the producer, and then to the consumer.

The machine in its operation imitates the form of hand labour. It consists of a strong pick, moved forwards with a powerful jerk by the semi-rotation of a perpendicular shaft to which the end of the handle of the pick is affixed. This shaft is moved half round and backwards again by the rod of a piston, which is set in motion by the successive discharges of the compressed air. One man is sufficient to work the machine, which is capable of discharging ninety blows in a minute. The machine runs on a little railroad, and can move itself forwards and backwards, and the pick can be steered to point in any direction that may be desired.

Two gentlemen walking one day in the streets of London paused to watch the operations of a new street-sweeping machine that had just been introduced. One of them, on observing how efficiently it did its work, expressed some pity for the poor sweepers who would be driven out of their vocation. The other expressed his joy that they would be forced into bettter employment, and hoped the day would come when all menial tasks should be performed by machinery, and men be set free for the higher forms of labour. The latter was the truer and more comprehensive philanthropist, though the former might have been the more tender-hearted. Nothing has done so much as machinery for the labouring class. It has not only made a thousand new industries possible, but it constantly tends to raise the common labourer to the dignity of an artisan. To guide a machine is a higher task than to put forth mere muscular strength. Kindness of heart and benevolent sympathy have done much to alleviate the condition of those whose lot it is to live by toil. But all the benevolence that ever was, has done but little for the elevation of the masses compared with what has been done indirectly by machinery.

GARDINER, HOSIE, AND PEISLEY.

FROM the letter of the Sydney Correspondent of the Bathurst Times which appeared in that journal of Wednesday the 13th instant, we quote the following passages. The writer says:—

The most strenuous efforts were made to induce the witnesses against Gardiner to perjure themselves.

A week before he was to be put upon his trial for the robbery of Messrs. Horsington and Hewitt, the former gentleman was offered three hundred pounds to be non est when the case should be called on. This offer was indignantly declined by Horsington with the assurance that three thousand pounds—much less three hundred—would not induce him to frustrate the ends of justice.

Not satisfied with the failure in their first attempt, the same admirers of the martyr-bushranger made another effort. The day before the assizes commenced they came again: "If you are afraid to make yourself scarce, you shall have a hundred pounds to say you cannot swear whether the prisoner is the man who robbed you or not." This proposition was as indignantly met as the former one, and the only thing to be regretted is that Horsington did not file an information against his tempters.

It may be asked how I know these facts. I know them from Horsington himself and he knows that they will be published in your Wednesday's issue.

Failing to bribe one man, they fall foul of another—the most dangerous to their cause—but are equally unsuccessful. They attempt to bribe Hosie; but he is as incorruptible now as he ever has been. And this brings me to that part of my subject that has caused me more anxiety than anything upon which I have ever written or spoken.

When the arch-ruffian Peisley was about to be hanged, he declared on the gallows, that he never rescued Gardiner from the custody of Hosie; but that Hosie accepted a bribe of fifty pounds to let his prisoner go. Everybody—or nearly everybody—believed the dying murderer's words, and almost superhuman efforts were made to save his life; but they failed.

It has been asked over and over again, whether Peisley would dare to die with a lie in his mouth? But those who put the interrogatory forgot to look at the motive that induced the man to make such a declaration. It is quite clear that if Peisley had had no other charge preferred against him but that of taking the life of Benyon, there would have been a much greater chance of his escaping the extreme penalty of the law. He knew this, and his natural anxiety was to make it appear that he was not guilty of the felony of rescuing his "pal" by force. To the last moment he believed he would be reprieved, and he died with the lie on his lips.

Notwithstanding the total absence of anything like a scintilla of evidence against Hosie beyond the words of the ruffian who had just passed into the presence of his Maker, the trooper was disgraced and dismissed the service, amid the execrations of the majority of the people of the Western districts. I, however, and a few others who knew Hosie's character still adhered to the belief of his innocence, and hoped that the day would eventually come when it should be proved to the world. That day has arrived. The question has been put to Gardiner himself, and he has admitted that no such circumstance ever transpired as was stated by Peisley; but that he was taken away by force from Hosie's custody, who only surrendered his prisoner when he found that it would be only throwing his own life away to oppose himself to two fresh men armed to the teeth.

I am only too glad to know that justice must be done to this long maligned and ill-used brave man. No doubt Hosie has felt the oil that has been poured into the wounded feelings already, by the Chief Justice in addressing Gardiner before sentence.

THE FLOODS RELIEF FUND.—At a meeting of the sub-committee of the Floods Relief Fund, held yesterday afternoon, it was resolved to send £250 to the West Maitland committee, and also 500 bushels of wheat, 250 bushels of oats, and 250 bushels of barley. Sums of £250 were also voted for the committees at Morpeth and at Windsor. The committee further determined on sending a small quantity of wheat and barley and oats to the settlers on the lands between Menangle and Picton.

THE WEATHER.—On the night of the 13th instant the wind, which had gradually got round to the E.N.E. with rain, freshened as the night advanced, and during the whole of the 14th blew very hard with passing showers, in the afternoon it partially cleared up, but at dusk commenced to blow and rain as heavy as before, continuing till 8 a.m. on the 15th, when the wind suddenly chopped round to south and then to south-east, blowing a strong gale with torrents of rain; the breeze partially lulled towards 9 p.m. but the rain still continued. No very serious consequences have ensued within the municipality of Newtown in consequence of the heavy rains which commenced on Thursday evening; but much of the lowland between Newtown and Cook's River was covered with water at an early hour yesterday morning, and it appeared probable that before night the flood would rise above the foundations of several of the dwellings. Although the rain has been falling heavily during the last few days along the Southern and Western lines, up to a late hour last night no reports of damage to the railway works had arrived. The river at Menangle rose yesterday more than twelve feet, and was within seven feet of the railway bridge. Portions of the line between Liverpool and Campbelltown were yesterday morning submerged, but by the afternoon the water had passed off, and the embankments did not appear to have sustained any injury. On the Western line also the traffic was carried on yesterday without interruption, and the evening trains from Picton and Penrith arrived punctually to time at the Redfern terminus. Preparations have, however, been made by the traffic manager for the prompt repair of the banks upon any damage being discovered.

FLOODS AGAIN.—The heavy rain of the last thirty-six hours seems to have extended very widely over the country, and again have the waters risen in the lately inundated districts—to such an extent as to cause the worst apprehensions. At Windsor the river had risen upwards of twenty feet last night, and at Penrith the Nepean is again bank high. Yass seems to have been visited with heavy rain, as the river had risen to nearly the same height as at the great Gundagai flood, and several casualties are reported. At West Maitland, yesterday, the river was eighteen feet above high water mark, and at Goulburn the river is within four feet of the highest point reached last flood. Tamworth, too, seems to have been similarly visited.

SYDNEY DISTRICT COURT BUILDING.—The recurrence of heavy rain has rendered this building—which, under the most favourable circumstance, is unfit to keep a decent pig in—in a worse condition than it has been on any previous occasion. The roof does not protect the building from the weather in the slightest degree, as the rain flows through, and drips from the ceiling in all parts of the Court. Yesterday there was a leak in the ceiling, immediately over where his Honor the Presiding Judge and the Registrar sit, and hence they were obliged to sit considerably on one side. When counsel rose to make an application for a new trial in Mooney v. M'Mahon, Mr. Salomons jocosely remarked that he should object to his Honor sitting in the case, as he must necessarily be one sided. Large patches of the plaster have fallen in different parts of the Court House, and the falling of other portions appears imminent. The barristers' tables were yesterday covered with water which dripped from the ceiling, so they were necessitated to keep their briefs in their hands or their pockets, and the suitors' children might have amused themselves by swimming toy ships on the floor.

WITNESSES IN THE DISTRICT COURT.—Those who have business in the District Court must have frequently noticed the large number of witnesses that are called in cases tried in this Court, and the eagerness of counsel for the successful suitors in applying for the payment of the expenses for their witnesses immediately upon the termination of the cases. On a recent occasion when an application of this kind was made, the presiding Judge refused it, and remarked that for the future he should discourage the practice of claiming expenses for so many witnesses. He did not believe it was ever intended by the Act to give expenses of several witnesses in every case, but the provision was made as a protection to those witnesses who could not afford the time necessary to attend and give evidence.

ST. PETER'S PENNY BANK.—The second annual meeting of the trustees of St. Peter's Penny Bank was held on Thursday, the 14th instant, Mr. M. Metcalfe in the chair. The secretary read his report, which stated that the sum of £108 6s. 11d. had been deposited in 835 deposits, and the sum of £106 19s. 4d. withdrawn. The balance in the bank is £55 3s. 6d., which amount is represented by sixty-seven depositors. The report was adopted, and the treasurer's accounts passed, and it was resolved that in future a bonus at the rate of 5 per cent. be given to such depositors as shall have had ten shillings to their credit in any consecutive six months during the year.

LOOK OUT FOR CENTIPEDES.—A correspondent writes as follows:—Most travelled persons have heard of the negro who, when he found a cockroach in his master's boot, exclaimed, "Hi, golly, Massa! nebber see de day cockroach wear boots." No doubt his outcry was silly and ludicrous; but in regard to the boot-wearer, or occupant of a boot belonging to one of my family, it was anything but ludicrous; indeed, serious consequences might have ensued, and likely would, had it been summer instead of winter. The facts are these: My daughter, after wearing her boots, about three-quarters of an hour, during which she walked a good deal about the house, felt something moving under her foot, and on taking off the boot saw therein a centipede upwards of three inches in length, all alive (I won't say kicking), but moving about very briskly. The insect was shortly destroyed, and providentially no harm occurred. It is well known that in such miserable rainy weather of which we have had so much lately, when the walls get damp, these venomous things often creep out through any small opening under the skirting boards, or other such places, and may creep into any article of apparel which happens to fall on the floor, as well as into boots; therefore, I say again, look out for centipedes.

THE CAPITAL OF NEW ZEALAND.—Some time ago a resolution was passed by the legislature of New Zealand to remove the capital to some site in the neighbourhood of Cook's Straits. The selection of the particular spot—as those who carried the resolution have personal interest—was to be referred to three gentlemen nominated severally by the Governors of New South Wales, Victoria, and Tasmania. These have received their appointments. Mr. Docker (a gentleman of known integrity) has been nominated by Sir John Young; Sir John Murphy (formerly Speaker of the Legislative Assembly), by Governor Darling; and Mr. Gunn (a gentleman well known in the scientific world), by Colonel Browne. We understand that their power of choice does not extend beyond Cook's Straits, and therefore the great question, as most would esteem it, is taken from their arbitration. They will immediately proceed to the fulfilment of their task, which will require not only sharp eyes and open ears, but an indifference to personal interests which will be the making of many fortunes.

SYDNEY SAILORS' HOME.

THE Rev. John Reid, of the Mariners' Church, has recently been delivering a series of lectures, specially addressed to seamen, and which have been well attended. "The "Advantages of a Sailors' Home in this city," formed the subject of one of these lectures. Subsequently, a memorial urging the opening of the Home, and signed by upwards of 300 seamen, was presented by Mr. Reid to Sir William Manning, chairman of committee, on the afternoon of Wednesday last. The memorial is in the following terms:—

To Sir William Manning, and the other members of the committee of the Sydney Sailors' Home.

GENTLEMEN,—It is now four or five years since the building of the Sailors' Home was commenced, and we regret that it is still unoccupied.

We are glad to know that steps are now being taken to finish the interior of the building, and to prepare a suitable residence for the superintendent.

We are informed that a considerable sum of money is yet required before the "Home" can be opened, and that it is in contemplation to postpone the event till this amount [illegible] actually realised.

We are aware of the great difficulty at present in raising funds in consequence of the numerous and pressing demands made upon the charity of the benevolent; but we humbly hope that the wealthy citizens of Sydney will do all they can towards the completing of an undertaking, which owes its origin to their public spirit and philanthropy.

It is well known that during the past year upwards of [illegible] seamen have entered the Harbour of Sydney, and this fact ought to operate as a powerful stimulus to united and immediate effort.

We do not deem it necessary to enumerate the advantages of a Sailors' Home, as these are well known and readily admitted. Every argument for the commencement of the Home is [illegible] also (of course) an argument for its occupancy without delay.

In conclusion, we beg to state that we have ventured to address this letter to you, not in the way of complaint, but simply with a view to manifest the interest we feel, and thereby to stimulate the liberality of the public.

Sydney, June 29th.

RECOVERY OF THE HEAD OF CAPTAIN LLOYD.

IT may be remembered that, on the morning of the [illegible] April, Captain Lloyd of the 57th, and a small party of [illegible] corps, encountered the Maories at Ahuahu, when on a reconnoitring expedition; that five of the soldiers were killed, their leader being of the number—that their heads were cut off and taken away, and the bodies stripped, so that they could only recognise Captain Lloyd by his [illegible], he having been a very large man.

After being carried about, almost from one end of the island to the other, and exhibited to the admiring [illegible] the rebels—but more particularly the fanatical natives [illegible] Wanganui—the head has at length been recovered. The Wanganui Chronicle of 29th ultimo, thus records the fact:—

"Mr. Charles Broughton of this place, having learned that Captain Lloyd's head was at a pa on the Waitotara, and being promised the assistance of two of the Wai[illegible] natives, without whose aid he says he could not have gained his object, went out to Waitotara on Saturday last, having taken up his quarters at a friendly native's pa, two and a-half miles from Perikama (the pa where Te Ua was with the head), he sent a messenger requesting an interview with Te Ua, who, accompanied by Hapurona [illegible] Waitara, and some of the leading Taranaki and Ngatiruanui chiefs, with a following of nearly one hundred men, made his appearance next morning about daylight. They entered the pa from both ends armed to the teeth; and with [illegible] others sat down for a korero, about thirty-five [illegible] standing as if on guard. Te Ua then asked Mr. Broughton what he wanted. His reply was that he wanted the head that he had the head of an officer, an English gentleman, he, a private individual, feeling it an insult that it should remain so close to the settlement, had come unarmed, and of his own accord, to request him to give it up. Te Ua made a long speech, chanting [illegible] and 'pai marire' songs, the purport being that he was anxious to be at peace and to do no evil. Mr. Broughton declined to enter on political subjects, and again asked for the head. After some difficulty it was delivered to him, and he arrived in town with it on Sunday forenoon. The public in general, and the brother officers of the late Captain Lloyd in particular, will, we are sure, be much gratified at the success of Mr. Broughton's attempt, which is highly creditable to him, but is nothing more than those who know his character and his acquaintance with the natives would expect. The head, we understand, is almost perfect, merely wanting part of the under jaw, and is easily recognisable. Ensign Cumming will take it to [illegible] for burial."

WINDSOR.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

POLICE OFFICE, Tuesday, July 11th.—Before [illegible] J. Ascough and E. Powell, justices of the peace. [illegible] Bennett, as principal, and James Smith, and [illegible] Williams, as accessories, appeared to answer a charge preferred by William Collis, of Eastern Creek, of stealing a five gallon keg of o.p. rum, valued at £4, on the [illegible] June last. The case had occupied the two previous days with the evidence for the prosecution, and was concluded to-day, when the witnesses for the defence were examined. On the case being resumed this morning the defendants, Smith and Williams, were discharged, the Bench considering that no case had been made out against them requiring an answer. The main circumstances appeared to be shortly as follows: Mr. Collis's premises, at Eastern Creek, were inundated during the recent heavy flood, and he and his wife had taken themselves into the top loft of their house, with such things as they could, amongst which was the keg of rum in question. The waters were rising above the floor of the loft, and he swore that he lashed the keg to the battens of the roof inside, and then shut and fastened the window. He then made a small square opening higher up in the roof, through which he intended himself and wife should make their escape, if necessary; but it was impossible for the keg to get through this opening. The keg was afterwards found by him in the possession of the defendant Bennett, who refused to give it up. The witnesses for the defence, who were numerous, proved that on Sunday afternoon, the [illegible] June, three of them from Windsor went out in a boat. They came to Collis's and found him and his wife up to their waists in water in the loft of their house. They were both intoxicated, and one of them had a bottle of rum in hand half full. The bottle was thrown away, and Collis and wife were with some difficulty got into the boat, and safely landed on the nearest shore. They were taken off the loft landing, and the door was locked by Collis when he left, but the dormer window was open, out of which a keg such as that produced might easily float. The keg of rum was picked up the next day (Monday) floating amongst some stacks of Mrs. Williams' by the defendants Bennett, Williams, and Smith, and another party. It was brought ashore and opened; Bennett stuck to it, and a number of persons drank of the contents. The keg with the remainder was produced in Court. The Bench discharged the defendant, considering that no felonious intent had been proved against him, but said they had no doubt the rum belonged to Collis, and directed him to take the keg, which he did. Mr. Walker appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. [illegible] for the defence.

FLOOD RELIEF.—The committee had a long sitting on Tuesday, namely, from eleven a.m. till twelve o'clock at night, allowing adjournments for meals. This was necessary to get through the heavy business in hand without further delay. It seemed that some £1200 was at the disposal of the committee, which was allotted amongst upwards of [illegible] approved applicants in sums ranging from £13 down to as low as £1 6s. 8d. each, according to losses and circumstances. A return in a printed form asked for by the Sydney committee was brought under consideration, but it was doubted whether it could be furnished, the particulars required being too complex and extensive. A return was [illegible] for previously of a simpler character was directed to be [illegible]. The secretary and committee have been indefatigable in their labours.

WOOL-DRESSING—SEPARATING THE B[illegible] &c., FROM IT.

To the Editor of the Herald.

SIR,—Seeing by the public journals that there is a spirit of inquiry alive in the Australian colonies, having for its object the necessity of some mode of an economical character being discovered to free wool from burs, or [illegible] matters of all kinds, I offer the following suggestions for consideration:—

At one meeting of wool producers a chemical process was suggested which had been lately discovered to free wool from burs or woody matters of all kinds by chemical action.

The only chemical compounds which have the power to dissolve burs or woody matters are hydrates of soda or potash (or caustic soda and potash). These compounds could not possibly be employed without producing a chemical change in the constitution of the wool of a [illegible] nature. The wool would be depreciated to a great extent for manufacturing purposes, and if not used with great caution the wool would be destroyed completely.

The well known technicality "yolky condition," so valuable to the manufacturer, would be destroyed by the hydrated soda or potash alkalies, thus bringing the wool to a condition worthless to the manufacturer, who [illegible] value as it suits his purpose.

The party who invented that process must be of a sanguine temperament, and little acquainted with the nature of wool, to propose a chemical process to effect the removal of burs or woody matters contained in wool. I have personally experimented chemically on wools with the alkalies, and their combinations, for the purpose of finding out the best possible condition that wool could be brought to to receive the brightest colouring at the hands of the dyer I found in those experiments that wool, in [illegible] out, was organically altered, especially by alkalies; it could not be used economically for the purpose. The mechanical process to free wool from burs or woody matters, which has been [illegible] a cheap rate for the last twelve or [illegible] years, at Leeds, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. I believe the machinery is not of a costly construction, and does its work well. The principle of construction is a combination of metallic combs. I think the above machine resulted from a prize proposed by the Society of Arts.

If anxious thoughts have taken hold of the wool producer now, I venture to predict he will have more cause shortly, in the fact of the country being overrun to such an unprecedented extent with [illegible] year, the seeds of burs and thistles being carried by flood waters widely and advantageously for greatly [illegible] production.

The machinery ought to be seen to at once, to prevent as much as possible the inevitable depreciation of wool owing to not being properly cleaned.

LAW.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY.

ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION.

BEFORE Mr. Justice Milford and a jury of four.

ECKFORD AND ANOTHER V. ECKFORD.

The trial of this case was resumed and concluded. It commenced on Monday, the 4th instant, and occupied ten days.

It was an issue between Peter and James Eckford on the one hand, and Joseph Eckford on the other, the former asserting, and the latter denying, that a certain document dated the 8th June, 1863, was the last will and testament of Mary Eckford, deceased (the mother of both plaintiffs and defendant).

Between forty and fifty witnesses were examined. Those on the part of the plaintiffs were rather more numerous than those called for the defendant, but the evidence as to the principal facts in dispute was, except in this respect, pretty evenly balanced, and it was a question for the jury to say, looking at the whole of the facts, on which side they believed the truth to lie. The evidence was in many respects so conflicting as to lead to the conclusion that there must have been perjury on one side or on the other.

Sir William Manning, Q.C., and Mr. Stephen appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Darvall, Q.C., and Mr. Butler, for the defendant.

The question at issue in this case was as to the legality of the will before mentioned, or rather as to the legality of conflicting wills and codicils. The testatrix was a woman who, at the time of her death, was about eighty years of age, resided on the Morpeth Road, and was possessed of considerable property. As to what was its precise value, however, the evidence was very conflicting. By one witness it was estimated as high as from £45,000 to £50,000, while by others it was valued at not more than £5000. This variance was partly occasioned by different calculations as to the value of real property, but chiefly in differences of estimate as to the extent of personal property. On one side it was averred that certain stations which had been established by some of testatrix's sons had been established with her money, and really should form a part of her personal estate; while on the other it was maintained that these stations really belonged to the member or members of the family who established and held them. The old lady, who died on the 10th February last, had made two principal wills and six codicils. To one of these principal wills, made on the 30th May, 1853, by Mr. Joseph Chambers, of Maitland (solicitor and Crown Prosecutor), there were six codicils, and to the other principal will dated 8th June, 1863, made by Mr. John O'Meagher, also of Maitland, there was one codicil. But the effect of this last-named codicil was simply to set up the will of June, 1863, and repudiate that of May, 1853, with all its codicils; while the sole object of one of the codicils to the will of May, 1853, was to disavow the will of June, 1863. The substantial point at issue was whether the will of May, 1853, and its codicils, or that of June, 1863, were to be regarded as the true and genuine testamentary disposition of the testatrix's property.

The will of June, 1863, being that of latest date, and set up by the most recent of all the codicils, was the one which, if genuine, would prevail. The executors named in this will were three of the testatrix's sons—William, Peter, and James. William, who resided on "the station," did not act. Peter and James applied to administer. Joseph, another son of the testatrix, lodged a caveat against this application, alleging that, at the time the will of 1863 was made, his mother was not in a state of mind capable of disposing of her property; consequently that it was not really her will but a pretended will. To determine the question of fact thus raised an issue had been directed.

The litigants were brothers, and the dispute, like most suits at law between near relatives, was carried on with a peculiar degree of rancour. Personal insinuations of various kinds were levelled by brother against brother, and it was clear from the evidence that this sort of recrimination had been going on for a long time. The testatrix for many months before her death had been more or less ill, and her children (or some of them) appear from the first of these illnesses to have worried her a good deal as to the disposition of her property. But each accused the other of this species of misbehaviour, and declared the innocence and purity of his or her own proceedings. The principal disputants were Peter Eckford, who sought to sustain the will of 1863; and Joseph Eckford, who sought to set it aside, and to uphold that of 1853 and the codicils to it. Peter had from the first resided with his mother, managing her property, or rather assisting her in its management. John, testatrix's eldest son, was a man of independent property. Joseph kept a public house at Campbell's Hill, near Maitland, and was a member of Parliament. William resided on the station which he had established, or aided in establishing. Henry was a farmer, and James—said to be the poorest of the sons—was something of the same sort. Mrs. Dixon, testatrix's daughter, was a widow, and was also the holder of a farm, and said to be independent. William did not appear in this matter. Of the other children John, James, and Peter were arrayed in this matter against Joseph, Henry, and Mrs. Dixon. All the parties appeared to be of mature age, and there were many grandchildren, some of them married, and some of whom were examined as witnesses.

The first of the testamentary documents before the jury was the will drawn by Mr. Chambers, and dated the 30th of May, 1853. By this the testatrix bequeathed two acres of land, in East Maitland, to her son Joseph Eckford, and the residue of her real estate to her sons Peter Eckford and James Eckford, to be equally divided between them. To her daughter, Mrs. Dixon, she left six cows and calves, and the residue of her real estate she divided equally between her sons Peter, James, and Joseph. The executors appointed under this will were Messrs. Edward Charles Close, Richard Mayo, and William Eckford.

The first codicil, also drawn by Mr. Chambers, was dated the 15th of January, 1859. By this she bequeathed her house and various personal property (furniture, &c.), therein to her son Peter.

The second codicil, likewise drawn by Mr. Chambers, was dated the 20th of August, 1859. By this £500 were bequeathed to Mrs. Quinn (a grand-daughter), and the whole of the testatrix's personal estate, "excepting the stock at the stations," was given to Peter.

The next in order of date was the disputed will of 8th June, 1863, drawn by Mr. O'Meagher. By this there was a bequest of £500 to Mrs. Quinn for life, with a limitation over in favour of her children. Six cows and calves from testatrix's station at Boondoon were bequeathed to Mrs. Dixon. The residue of the cattle and unbroken horses on the said station were bequeathed to Peter and James. Two acres at East Maitland were devised to Joseph. Half-an acre was devised to testatrix's trustees as a burial ground. Testatrix's own house and the premises occupied by her were devised to Peter; and the residue of her land at East Maitland, and farm on the Morpeth Road, to Peter and James. A grant of half-an-acre of land, made in 1853, to Mrs. Dixon was revoked. It was declared that the money to be received from the Government as compensation for some land taken for the Northern railway should form part of testatrix's residuary estate, and there was a general devise of the residue of her real and personal estate to Peter. Of this will William, Peter, and James were appointed executors.

On the 29th of June, 1863, there was a codicil, drawn by Mr. Chambers, revoking the last-named will drawn by Mr. O'Meagher. The codicil was not annexed to this will of 30th May 1853, inasmuch as it was not then to be immediately got at; but all the other codicils drawn by Mr. Chambers were so annexed.

On the 30th June, 1863, there was a codicil drawn by Mr. Chambers, setting up more formally the will of 30th May, 1853, and the codicils of 15th January, 1859, and 29th August 1859. By this instrument testatrix devised half an acre of land near her residence, including the burial ground, to Mrs. Dixon; and the rest of her farm to Peter and James, excepting the house already given to Peter. The money to be received on account of the railway was to be divided between Peter, James, and Mrs. Dixon. The stock and stations were to be divided between Peter, James, and Joseph. Testatrix's land at Newcastle was devised equally between Peter, James, Mrs. Dixon, and Mrs. Quinn. Messrs. John Eckford, R. Mayo, and William Eckford were by this codicil appointed executors.

A fifth codicil to the will of May, 1853, bore no date but was said to have been executed in August, 1863. This also was drawn by Mr. Chambers. It bequeathed to Peter the money payable on account of the railway, instead of dividing it between Peter, James, and Joseph.

The sixth and last codicil to the will of May, 1853, was dated 6th November, 1863, and was likewise drawn by Mr. Chambers. By this one-half share in a cottage and ground at East Maitland, occupied by one Hinch, was devised to Mrs. Dixon, and testatrix's Newcastle property to Peter and James equally. Mrs. Quinn's legacy was reduced from £500 to £400, and a feather bed, wearing apparel, and a "warming pan" were bequeathed to Mrs. Dixon. By this codicil, the testatrix also appointed Peter "one of her executors and trustees."

The will drawn by Mr. O'Meagher—of 8th June, 1863—was re-established by a codicil dated the 8th of December following.

The testatrix was a markswoman, and executed all these documents in the manner usual in such cases.

The will of 1853 and the first two codicils had been left in the custody of Mr. Chambers, by whom they had been drawn, and who has always acted as Mrs. Eckford's attorney, whenever she required one. He had thus acted not only as a professional man, but as a friend of the family, and particularly of the old lady. Peter got the will away while Mr. Chambers was absent on circuit, and the Messrs. O'Meagher were sent for to read this will as well as, if thought necessary, to make a new one. According to the plaintiffs, the will had been sent for at the old lady's own request, and finding that it did not dispose of her property according to her then wishes, had directed a new one to be made, and had sent repeated messages to hurry its preparation. According to the defendant, the will of 1853 was got away by Peter to suit his own purposes, and the will of O'Meagher was prepared at a time when Mrs. Eckford was in such a state of mental and bodily imbecility as to render her incompetent to make a valid will. On the one hand it was sworn by several witnesses that at this time the testatrix, although weak, appeared to know very well what she was about. On the other, it was sworn that she was unable to speak coherently for any length of time when the will of June, 1863, and the codicil of December following were said to have been made, and was totally unable to make a rational distribution of her property. One matter of recrimination was, that the old lady, when helpless, had been plied with drink until she became intoxicated. On the one side it was alleged that this had been done by Peter; and on the other that Joseph had sent liquor for the purpose. There had been a good deal of mutual accusation, and there was a proportionate amount of scandal brought out which need not be here repeated. Peter and James were accused of coercing the old lady into such a disposition of her property as met their own views, while Joseph was accused of pestering her with the same object, and Mrs. Dixon, of aiding him. Henry's evidence, as far as it went, was in favour of Joseph's view of the case, while that of John, who took nothing under either of the wills, was strongly confirmatory of the plaintiff's case. Several grandchildren were examined on both sides. After it became known to Joseph that the first will had been got from Mr. Chambers, and he ascertained from enquiry that his mother had made another will, there was a family discussion, during which the old lady positively asserted that she had made no second will, or if she had that she had no recollection of it. It was upon the assurance of some of her children that she had done so, that Mr. Chambers was sent for and the codicils of 29th and 30th June were made. It was clear that the old lady had heard something said about Mr. Chambers, and it was averred that this was why she sent for the will to be read by others so as to see if her wishes were properly expressed. But what had been said about the gentleman in question need not be here repeated, inasmuch as his own explanation was not heard during this investigation. According to Mr. Chambers, the testatrix was in a "disposing" state of mind at the time when she made the several codicils to the will of 1853, and the Messrs. O'Meagher were equally positive as to her being in such a state when she made the will of 1863 and the final codicil thereto. There was a great deal of conflicting testimony in support of these two views, and of various conversations by testatrix expressive of her intentions in connection with the distribution of her property. Notwithstanding the repudiation already mentioned of the will of 1853, there were said to have been many intimations by testatrix of intentions in accordance with that will, and the repudiation was attributed by plaintiffs to Joseph's influence. Some evidence was gone into to show that the O'Meaghers could not have been with the old lady at the time the will and codicil were said to have been executed; but this evidence failed to prove any such fact, and was boldly impeached by plaintiff's counsel as perjured. If the evidence of the Messrs. O'Meagher and of Mr. Simpson (an attesting witness of the will of June, 1863,) was believed, it was impossible to resist the conclusion that testatrix must have known what she was about. A clergyman (the Rev. Mr. Tyrrell) who had attended her in her last illness spoke of her as a woman who, notwithstanding her great age and bodily weakness, possessed a remarkably clear mind; and several other witnesses (including a homœopathic practitioner, who also attended her) spoke to the same effect. Strong reliance was placed upon the fact that after all the disputes about Peter the latter was made an executor under a codicil (of November) drawn by Mr. Chambers, thus showing the mother's reliance upon that particular member of her family. The testatrix was unquestionably in a very low state when she executed the final codicil—in December—but according to the testimony on the part of the plaintiffs, she was clearly capable of understanding what she was doing. And on the following day she executed a deed prepared by Mr. Chambers, for the conveyance of the land used for the railway whereon compensation had been paid. But Mr. Chambers doubted whether she would at that time have been in a state to make any new disposition of her property, and would not have been a party to any such new distribution. In fact he had refused to make any such changes after November. There was also the same conflicting evidence of the other witnesses as to testatrix's state at this time. In fact it would be impossible to give in details the conflicting statements and recriminations in this case without a report of great length, which would be only of interest to the parties concerned, and would also, from the very nature of the contest and of the recriminations themselves, be inexpedient.

His Honor told the jury that the only question for their consideration was whether the testatrix had made the will of June, 1863 and the codicil republishing the same on the 8th of December following. The law of the case was simply this: A will was duly proved by the oath of the attesting witnesses unless it was impeached in one of three ways—by fraud; by the insanity or mental incompetency of the testatrix; or by proof of its having been executed under undue influence. It was for the jury to say whether there was any evidence whatever of fraud. As to sanity, it was necessary that a person making a will should be at the time of a sound disposing mind, memory, and understanding. Influence to vitiate a will must be of such a nature as to destroy the free agency of the testatrix. Such a pressure, in fact, that for the mere sake of peace she acquiesced in a disposition of her property contrary to her own wishes. But if influence was exercised to sustain particular views, and if these views were adopted by the testatrix, the will must stand.

After the jury had retired for about twenty minutes, a verdict by majority was accepted by consent. The verdict was for the plaintiffs.

Supreme Court of New South Wales.

Friday, the 15th day of July, 1864.

It having been found necessary to adjourn the sittings of this Court in its Criminal Jurisdiction for the trial of prisoners committed before the present session of gaol delivery to Monday, the 1st August next, the cause Dolby v. the Bank of New South Wales, appointed for trial on that day in the Jury Court, is hereby ordered to stand for trial on Monday, the 8th August.

ALFRED STEPHEN.
SAMUEL F. MILFORD.
EDWARD WISE.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE Mr. Justice Wise, and a mixed jury.

ARSON.

William Radley was indicted for that he, on the 21st December, 1862, at Sydney, did feloniously, unlawfully, and maliciously set fire to his office with intent to defraud the Northern Insurance Company; there were other counts charging with intent to injure that Company, and to injure E. J. Scrivener.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The Solicitor-General prosecuted on behalf of the Crown. The prisoner was undefended.

On the jury taking the box, the prisoner addressed his Honor, and said he believed he had a right of challenge; and as that right was exercisable on the ground of supposed prejudices on the part of the jury, he would wish to know whether he had any means of inquiring whether any of the jury were subject to such prejudices.

His Honor said that the prisoner had a right to challenge twenty jurors without any inquiry or without giving any reasons, and after that he was at liberty to challenge on cause shewn.

The prisoner: The fact is, your Honor, I wish to know whether any of the jury are Freemasons, because I know that the Freemasons are prejudiced against me, and will not act justly towards me.

His Honor: I do not know whether it is open to you to make any such inquiry.

The prisoner: I have understood that a man may claim to be tried by his peers. I make that claim, but as I am not a Freemason, Freemasons are not my peers.

His Honor: I never heard of such a thing as a juryman being examined in the first instance on such a point; but I will do this. I will tell the jury that if there be any one of them who is prejudiced against the prisoner, and feels himself to be so, that he had better retire.

The prisoner: Understand me, your Honor, I have no objection to the jury. I only desire to challenge such of them as are illiberal Freemasons, and by illiberal Freemasons I mean those who are firmly wedded to the obligations which they imagine themselves to be under as Freemasons. The Index newspaper was published by me for the purpose of exposing the malpractices of the Freemasons, and on this account I have made myself obnoxious to that body.

The Solicitor-General: I have no objection to allow any juryman who conceives himself to be an illiberal Freemason, to retire.

His Honor said that perhaps the best way would be for any of the jurymen who were Freemasons to say so, and to retire.

This objection was adopted, and two of the jury very readily retired.

The jury having been sworn, and the information read to them.

The prisoner said: May I ask your Honor at what hour of the twenty-four the day commences?

His Honor: That objection will be of no avail, as under the present system of procedure it will be quite sufficient to show that you set fire to the premises on any day.

The Solicitor-General now addressed the jury, setting out the circumstances of the case as they would appear in evidence. He then called

Mr. John S. Parker, who deposed: I am coroner for the city of Sydney; I held an inquest on premises in George-street occupied by the prisoner; it was an office, in part of Mr. Scrivener's house; prisoner was examined as a witness; the deposition produced was read over to the witness, and he signed it. [Prisoner's evidence before the coroner's jury was read, together with the letters then handed in by the prisoner to the Coroner.] Prisoner was called again at the inquest at his own request; the deposition produced is the evidence he then gave. [This deposition was read.]

Before the reading was completed, prisoner complained that he was subject to fainting fits, having had several in the gaol. He felt one now coming, and asked his Honor to order him a glass of brandy and water.

His Honor could not take upon himself to make such an order, but he would send for the medical officer attached to the gaol, and would act on his suggestion.

Examination continued: Prisoner's cash-book was produced, in which was an entry relative to an attempt to enter his office. Mr Watson, of the Northern Insurance Company, was examined, and I believe has since died; Mr. Moffat, solicitor, was also examined, but he has left the colony; I examined the premises in company with the jury; you enter by an archway from George-street into a passage known as Mort's-passage; Moffat's office was on the same floor—on the first floor; prisoner's room was over the passage at the back; we had to go through a large room.

Cross-examined by prisoner: I was never on the premises before; I do not know how many rooms there are in the building; on the morning of the first day's inquest I met you; I do not remember that you asked me for leave to address the jury.

By the jury: There was an entrance to prisoner's room from the lobby without going through the front room.

John Bradly deposed: I am a watchman in Prince, Bray, and Ogg's establishment; Mort's-passage communicate with the rear of their premises; I know prisoner, who occupied an office on Mr. Scrivener's premises; I recollect the night of the fire; prisoner never gave me any notice, or said anything to me about danger; I commence my duties at four o'clock on Saturdays; on the day of the fire I was on duty at four o'clock and from that to midnight; I saw nobody going into prisoner's office between those hours; about twenty minutes to twelve I saw smoke coming out of the window of prisoner's room; I gave the alarm to Mr. Scrivener, and procured buckets from our place and handed up water to them to extinguish the fire; then an engine came up; I did not go into the house but remained in my own yard to keep people out; I smelt the smoke in the first instance; it was a nasty greasy black smoke.

Cross-examined: I know the outside but not the inside of Scrivener's house; I do not know how many doors open into the passage into which your room enters; I knew you had an office there before you told me so; there are seven persons who have access to their premises by Mort's-passage; to the best of my recollection the upper sash of the window was down, and it was through that the smoke came; I never refused Radley admission to his premises through this passage; I do not recollect seeing you there on Friday evening between seven and eight o'clock; I close the gates of the George-street entrance at eleven o'clock, after which I refuse admittance; the gates at the Pitt-street end are closed about nine o'clock; I am not a Freemason; after the gates were closed I do not know whether or not persons could get from Poehlman's cafe to Moffat's office; there were a large number of persons assembled after the fire broke out, but none before; none of these parties could have torn lodging in one of the empty rooms, because they could not have passed me; you have treated me to a glass of ale; it was for nothing; you did not ask me to go through the passage at an untimely hour; you did not tell me to look out because you were printing a publication that would make enemies.

By his Honor: No one could have passed me, because I was continually walking backwards and forwards.

John Smith deposed: I am assistant in Mr. Scrivener's shop; I recollect prisoner having a room on the second floor as a printing office; there was a room leading from prisoner's room to the front room, but this was locked; the two rooms entered upon a lobby; there were no other rooms occupied that opened into that passage; Mr. Moffat's offices were on the ground floor by the same entrance as to prisoner's room; the entrance was from the passage, and the door was always closed at eight o'clock; I recollect the night of the fire; the watchman gave the alarm, and I ran in and alarmed Mr. Scrivener; I then went up to the prisoner's room; the door was locked, and I broke it open with a hammer; I then saw that the fire was in the far off corner from the door near the window; I cannot say whether the window was open; directly I broke the door in, the smoke was so stifling that I had to retreat; I did not go in for this reason, but went down stairs for a drink of water, and then came up with Lewis (another shopman of Scrivener's, now at Rockhampton) and threw water into the room; when I went up there was nobody there either in the passage or in the lobby; there were several rooms empty, some of them approached by another stair but with an entry from Mort's Passage; I believe it was a man named Jones who broke in the door; I only smashed a panel of it and looked in; the fire was got under but I was not in the room; I could not force the door with the hammer I had.

Cross-examined by prisoner: I was in Mort's Passage getting the bar for the shutters when the alarm of fire was given; the gates were open; they had been closed but were open in order to let me get the shutters; I cannot say whether you were debarred from entrance into the passage after six o'clock; your agreement with Scrivener only allowed you an entrance up to eight o'clock; I cannot say anything about Moffat's time of entrance; communicating with this passage, there are ten rooms, two on the ground floor, six on the first floor, and two on the second; three of these were empty, but they were all locked up with the exception of the one in front of your office; on the night of the fire the door entering upon the passage was pulled to, but not fastened; the door was always closed in this way; there was a loose bolt at the bottom that used to catch when the door was pulled to; anybody knowing the secret could raise this bolt with a knife; the wicket in the gate was closed at eight o'clock, but might be opened with a knife; it was not closed on Saturday night until eleven o'clock; the fire, as far as I could see, was very small, looking not much larger than if it was a lantern; it seemed to me that it had not long been kindled when I saw it; no person in Mort's Passage said in my hearing that they saw a light; when the alarm was given there were a great number of persons present in the passage; I saw three cases removed from those premises about half-past seven on one morning before the fire; I did not see a printing press removed at that time or any time; I do not remember seeing any other cases removed; my attention was drawn to the removal by the fact of a dray coming into the gateway at so early an hour.

Re-examined: There were three medium-sized cases removed; I did not see them until they were on the dray; I did not know what was in the room; I was only in it once or twice; the removal was about a week before the fire.

By the jury: I do not remember seeing the prisoner about the premises on the day of the fire.

Charles Bown, deposed: I am assistant-superintendent of the United Insurance Companies' Brigade; I recollect the night of this fire; it was on Saturday night, and about a quarter to twelve we received information of it; I went with the two engines, and found the fire was making its way up to the roof; I set them both at work, one in the front and the other through the window from the back in the room; the window was closed; after I set the engines at work I went up to the room; the door was open, but I could not make any examination whilst the fire was burning; two or three hours afterwards, when the fire was got under, I examined the place; there were two or three type frames standing on their ends, and a case between the two frames, with wire round it as if it had been lashed to the frames with it; the type frames were of wood; there was some old straw and paper in the box; there were a lot of remains of burnt material; there was a bottle in which had been oil; the neck of the bottle was broken as if from the heat of fire; there was a match box on the window sill, but no matches in it; there was an old candle with the tallow nearly all melted from it in the match box; in making an examination of the premises for the remains of type metal, and found several pieces of lead pipe in various parts of the room; some of them had been acted upon by the fire; I was told to collect every thing in the shape of metal, and I picked up the pieces now produced; had we not arrived as we did, the fire would have been very serious; all the metal we found was sixteen and a quarter pounds, after the strictest search, and after the room having been in our custody from the time of the fire until the Tuesday following; there could not have been 100 pounds of metal; some of the metal found was type metal, but not more than half; the rest was lead; the floor was not burnt through, but the roof was, and the walls were charred; there were some trays for type, but no type in them; having seen and examined the room I could not say in what way the fire originated; my opinion at the time was that it was the work of an incendiary from the manner in which the type, forms, and cases were tied together; without a doubt the fire originated there, and they had the appearance of being purposely put there to burn; there was no lamp, candle, or matches; I should not think that the fire could be accidental, because the type frames were not in their usual position but were stood up on end. The type metal is worth 2s. or 3s. per lb. Only sixteen pounds of metal were found, and there could not have been more because the room was in our possession.

Cross-examined by prisoner: Where I found the cases were four or five feet from the window, lying to the right as you enter the door. The remains of the straw were lying between the frames. On Monday, the office was in possession of the brigade. One man was always on duty. I was there myself on Monday morning between ten and eleven o'clock. I did not discover the remains of any cases, and the fire was not so strong but I should have seen them had there been any.

By His Honor: There was a considerable amount of flame, caused by the contents of the box and the type frames. There was a large amount of debris, but so washed by water that it was impossible to identify it.

Re-examined: There could not have been any cases consumed, because timber always retains its form more or less after being burnt.

Thomas Manning, deposed: I am a compositor; I entered into prisoner's employment in September, 1862; I left it in December, 1862; I left him because he did not pay me, and because he said he was going into the country; he did not dismiss me, or say that he dismissed for insolence and theft; when I left on the 6th instant there were six or eight pairs of cases with type, and two racks; there was an ordinary shoe trunk in the room and some odds and ends of paper; the value of the type was about £80; there was more type but some of it had been taken away; as I distributed the type he put it up in paper parcels, as if to remove it; the paper there was worth about 40s.; when he first took the office he put on a new lock with two keys; he gave me one key and kept the other himself; I employed a boy, and he often came before me, and to let him enter I put the key over the ledge of the door for him, and he hung it on a nail for me; one day it was missed off the nail, and I charged prisoner with taking it, and he said he had not; I left on the 6th December, and went there two days afterwards to speak to Mr. Moffat about suing him; whilst I was in his employ he asked me if the insurance people had been up, and I said they had; he did not say whether he had insured or for what amount; there was a printing press, but I do not know what became of it; it was taken away within the last week I stopped; during the time I was there I never recollect seeing the door between prisoner's room and the front room opened; there was between four and five hundred weight of type when I was there; melting would not reduce the weight very materially; certainly not from four hundred weight to sixteen pounds; I know prisoner's handwriting; the agreement purporting to be between Radley and Kennedy is in prisoner's handwriting; from the knowledge I have of prisoner's writing, from setting so much of his copy, I believe the three threatening letters produced to be in prisoner's writing; they are in feigned hands, but I believe them to the best of my knowledge to be written by one person; I saw them at the inquest; prisoner showed them to me before that in his office; he made some remark that I do not well recollect, but I had my own opinion about them at that time; the letter produced addressed to the Coroner is also in prisoner's writing; prisoner used to abuse the Freemasons, and call them scoundrels, and I think that once or twice he expressed fear of them.

By the jury: There was only one press—a demy press; it was removed by prisoner before I left.

Cross-examined by prisoner: I commenced distributing the last number of the Index, but I cannot recollect the day; the last number was published somewhere about the 27th November; the press was removed prior to the 6th December; I did not delay the distribution of No. 3 of the Index, nor tell you that the type would carry better in the forms; I saw you wrapping up type in paper on the day when I left; there was an ink table in the room, but I do not think there was any other table; it was late on the day before, or early on the day I left, that I finished the distribution of the Index; we had a bit of disturbance on the Saturday, but the distribution was done before then. It would take me two and a-half days to distribute two demy forms; you may have paid me a portion of my money at the office, and part at your residence; I was glad to get it when I could; I threatened to throw the cases through the window if I was not paid; on the following Monday I went to your residence for payment, but you abused me, and told me to get it the best way I could; you raised a bar, and threatened to strike me with it; only two insurance agents called to my knowledge; I think you told me to steer clear of the Masonic body, and not have anything to do with them; St. Andrew's day is on the 30th November; I spent an evening with Mr. Scrivener, but I cannot say whether it was on St. Andrew's day; there was no party there, nor did I tell you when I came back that Scrivener was prepared to back me up to take the office from you; it happened to be on an election day that I went to Mr. Scrivener's, and we met in the street, and he took me home with him; I do not recollect that we had any unfriendly words before the 30th November; you gave me one of the keys of the door; I never returned it to you; I used to put the key on the frame of the door for the boy; the door was an ordinary sized one; the boy used to get the key and let himself in, but how I am not prepared to say; I did some private work for myself in your office before I left, and before No. 3 of the Index was printed; I understood from you that you were in treaty for the purchase of more type; you removed the press from my office; I had persons coming in to visit me in December before I left; one person, named Head, you ordered to leave the place; he is a master builder; I went to the Herald Office for a slip of the advertisement supposed to be from Kennedy; I thought from the style it was prisoner's, and when I went there I found it to be in prisoner's writing.

By his Honor: Robertson was frequently in company with prisoner; I believe he is now in Victoria.

Alfred Horrell deposed that he was employed by last witness in prisoner's office, and left with him; was instructed to hang the key on a nail, and always did so; on one occasion hung it there while he went out, and on his return missed it; had only been absent ten minutes; prisoner was there when witness came back and asked for the key; it was then that witness missed it, and prisoner said it was lost; saw the press taken away, and followed the dray to see where it went to; and was present during the disturbance between prisoner and last witness.

Mr. James R. Fairfax, one of the proprietors of the Sydney Morning Herald, produced the manuscript of an advertisement inserted in the Sydney Morning Herald.

Thomas Manning proved manuscript advertisement to be in the handwriting of the prisoner.

Charles Lemaire deposed: I keep a toy shop, but two years ago I kept a fruit shop; I know prisoner by the name of Kennedy; he used to come to my shop to buy fruit, and told me after a time that he had some printing material for sale, and asked if he might have letters addressed to my place; I said he might do so; I received two or three letters to that address for John Kennedy; he called about a week or ten days afterwards, and I gave him the letters; I had seen him many times, and cannot be mistaken; he is the man whom I knew as John Kennedy.

Cross-examined by prisoner: My business in fruit was not very extensive; I could not say how many casual customers I used to have in a day; I do not pretend to remember all the customers who call on me; the John Kennedy who called on me to ask permission for letters to be left there, that was yourself; John Kennedy was yourself, and you bought oranges on many occasions; once you did not buy anything, but you talked to me about the native sarsaparilla; you spoke about your brother in Liverpool, and that you had been travelling a great deal in the bush and knew all the plants. You came to me and asked if there were any letters. The day you came and asked permission to have letters addressed to my place, you told me your name was John Kennedy. I am not mistaken in you although you are now much altered. I am not a Freemason.

Mr. J. Henderson, agent for the Northern Insurance Company, deposed: I succeeded Mr. Watson as agent for that company. Mr. Watson is dead; he died between Melbourne and the Mauritius.

Mr. J. S. Parker, coroner, deposed that the evidence produced is that given by the late Mr. Watson on the inquest. (This evidence was put in and read.)

P. Lyons, detective officer, proved the apprehension of the prisoner.

This closed the case for the Crown.

James Flanagan, publican, of Parramatta, proved that on the night of the fire prisoner came to his house and remained there all night, leaving the next day.

Mrs. M'Carthy, of the Star of Peace hotel, corner of Kent and King streets, deposed that prisoner boarded with her. On the day of the fire prisoner went to Parramatta and did not return till the following day.

Michael Cunningham, barman at the Star of Peace, deposed that prisoner lodged at that hotel; did not see prisoner at the house on the day of the fire, nor till the day following; recollected some old gentleman coming and having some difficulty with prisoner; he wanted to write poetry for the Index, though he did not approve of the principles of that journal; I am not a Freemason.

Cross-examined by the Solicitor-General: Never recollected prisoner being away on any other day; the old gentleman was a small man; I saw no arms with him, but a bundle of papers.

Prisoner then addressed the jury for the defence, alluding to the circumstances of a suit between himself and W. P. Moffat, in which he asserted he had been baffled and wronged solely because Moffat was a Freemason, and because other Freemasons into whose hands he fell had all their sympathies enlisted against him. Under these circumstances he had commenced the Index newspaper, which, he admitted, had contained articles exceedingly irritating to the Freemasons as a body, and being quite sufficient to account for an enmity which, whilst endeavouring to ruin him in pocket, had not stopped in the attempt to fix this serious charge upon him. He need hardly say that he had himself had nothing whatever to do with the fire that had taken place. In the first place his arrangements had been all thrown into disorder by the dilatoriness and insolence of Manning, who had been set on by Scrivener and a party of Freemasons, with whom Manning had dined at Scrivener's house. He had had a commercial transaction with a Mr. Mills, and it had been solely for the purpose of carrying that out that he had effected an insurance with the Northern Insurance Company. And he was the more anxious to do this, because of the threatening letters he had received. He had removed the press for the same reason, as from the continued dread he was in, he had made up his mind not to have any more printing in that office. As to the fire, he had been absent from Sydney all day, first going to Penrith, returning in the afternoon, and going direct to Parramatta without visiting the office at all. He admitted that he had given loose evidence before the coroner's jury, but attributed this to nervous attacks to which he had lately been subjected, and which rendered his memory defective sometimes for hours, and sometimes for days. He had been absent from the office as shewn by the evidence for at least sixty hours immediately preceding the trial, whilst access to it was obtainable so easily by those who were anxious for his ruin. He denied that the anonymous letters that had been read were in his handwriting, and pointed out to the jury that almost of necessity must some letters in every person's handwriting be like that in the writing of others, since being in the round running hand, which all schoolboys learnt from the one copy which they tried to imitate as closely as possible, they must, being on the same model, all more or less resemble each other. With regard to the transaction with Kennedy, prisoner stated that he was anxious to purchase a part only of the type Kennedy had for sale, and that he had recommended that person to advertise the remainder. This, Kennedy had consented to do, and at Kennedy's request he had gone with him to the Herald Office and inserted the advertisement; afterwards, he had gone to Lemaire's, also at Kennedy's desire, to see if any answers to the advertisement had been received. He knew that, in order to relieve him from this charge, Kennedy's evidence was all-important to him, and, knowing this, he had left Sydney somewhat precipitately in order to overtake Kennedy who he knew had gone on to Melbourne. He had afterwards followed Kennedy to Adelaide and to England. He had been unsuccessful, and had returned to Melbourne in the latter end of last year, and thence had come on here. He then proceeded to answer the statements that had been made by the Solicitor-General in his opening address. He drew the attention of the jury to the fact that the policy of insurance had been effected prior to any threatening letters having been received, and admitted that had it been effected afterwards the policy would have been worth nothing, it he had failed to mention it. At this stage, a witness who had been subpœnaed by prisoner, and had not answered when called upon, entered the Court and was put into the box to give evidence.

John Mackay deposed that he was present at a conversation between prisoner and a person named Flanagan; an advertisement appeared in the paper, and Flanagan being a compositor, asked witness to go down with him to answer it; witness went but prisoner would come to no agreement whatever with Flanagan.

Prisoner continued his address generally summarising upon the evidence, but more especially dealing with that of Lemaire who, he contended, was mistaken in his identity, confounding him who went for the letters with the real Kennedy who had bought the fruit and obtained the permission to have the letters addressed there. His defence might be summed up on the following points:—That his intention and interest did not lie in such conduct; that he was not at the time short of money; that he was determined to continue the Index; that he contemplated a nullification of the policy by removal; that the insurance had been effected for a cause that would be damaged if a fire occurred; that the Index was then established as a paying journal; that the Government were on the point of offering him compensation; and that, lastly, there was an alibi of sixty hours that the Crown had in no way controverted. In conclusion, he would remind them that, if their verdict ensured his conviction, it would only be putting the climax to deeds of persecution he had suffered by, and would put the finishing stroke to his ruin by adding to it his degradation.

His Honor, in summing up, said that it was evident that prisoner had an impression on his mind that he was suffering from the persecution of a certain body of individuals; but though he might have this hallucination, he might, nevertheless, have been guilty of the crime imputed to him. And in this view the prisoner would be equally guilty whether he did the act himself, or by his arrangement caused it to be done by another. They would have to consider, first, was the house set on fire, or was the fire accidental; and next, if so, was it set fire to by the prisoner or by his cognizance. His Honor here entered upon the evidence quoting it very fully, as it bore upon these points, and upon such of the actings of the prisoner as were material to the elucidation of the question.

The jury retired, and after an absence of an hour and a quarter returned with a verdict of guilty. Prisoner was sentenced to be worked on the roads or other public works of the colony for five years. His Honor intimating that he would take care that prisoner should not be removed from the gaol.

The Court was adjourned to Monday, 1st August next.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE Mr. District Judge Cheeke.

CORBET V. COSTELLO.

This was an action to recover damages for injuries inflicted upon plaintiff's omnibus in a collision caused, as was alleged, by defendant's negligence in driving. It appeared that the plaintiff was driving an omnibus down South Head Road, at the time that the defendant was driving a young horse attached to a light cart in the opposite direction. When the two vehicles approached each other, defendant's horse swerved and ran against the omnibus, breaking one of the panels. Before defendant's horse touched the omnibus defendant called out to plaintiff to pull up, but he (plaintiff) said he was then too close to pull up. Several witnesses were examined, and it appeared that the defendant had used all reasonable precaution. Verdict for defendant without costs.

MOONEY V. M'MAHON.

This was a motion for a new trial. The case was heard on Monday last, and a verdict given for the plaintiff. The claim was for £23, the value of a horse, the property of plaintiff, and lent to defendant on trial. The question at issue was, whether defendant returned the horse to plaintiff, and on this point the evidence was very conflicting. His Honor stated at the time that he based his verdict for the plaintiff on the evidence of a youth, who, upon being recalled, contradicted the defendant upon a material point. Mr. Windeyer now applied for a new trial, on the grounds that the evidence was very conflicting, and that the verdict was against the weight of evidence. If a new trial were granted he should have no objection to have the case tried by a jury. His Honor, having heard Mr. Salomons in reply, said he would grant a new trial if Mr. Windeyer would show him that he had the power to do so on the grounds of the application, or if the other side would consent. Mr. Windeyer submitted that his Honor had the power to grant the application, and he remembered several cases in which new trials were granted upon the applicants paying the costs of the first trial. New trial refused.

The other motions were unimportant, and do not demand any special notice.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE the Police Magistrate, with Messrs. Spence, Asher, and Lyons.

One person was fined 10s., and two 20s. each, for riotous conduct.

On the summons paper were eighteen cases. Henry Hughes was fined 10s. for having used obscene language in a public place, and 20s. for having assaulted a constable; William Weir was fined 2s. 6d., and William Blakey 10s., for breaches of the Police Act; and in Martin v. Martin, a proceeding under the Deserted Wives and Children Act, an order was made in complainant's favour for 10s. a week. Two cases were struck out for want of parties, one was withdrawn, and one was dismissed; and four various other cases were not heard.

Ten persons were brought before the Court, of whom two were remanded, and other two were discharged. One of the remanded prisoners is a man named Robinson, who, it appears, in the month of November, 1862, represented to Messrs. D. and S. M. Levi, of Sydney, importers, that he was about to commence business as a storekeeper at Armidale, on which representation that firm sold him goods amounting to £158 7s. 9d., taking as payment his bill at four months date; the goods were duly shipped, and reached Newcastle, from which port a portion was shipped to California, and some were disposed of in the neighbourhood; Robinson himself was lost sight of; the bill was presented, as directed, when at maturity, but no provision had been made to honour it. Last month, however, Mr. Simeon M. Levi (the partnership with his brother having in the meantime terminated) received information that Robinson, under the name of Jonas, was conducting a boarding-house at Nelson, New Zealand, and forthwith took steps for his apprehension, swearing before the police magistrate an information that Robinson did, on a certain day, "falsely pretend that he was about immediately to open a store at Armidale," by means of which said false pretence he did obtain from D. and S. M. Levi a quantity of goods with intent to defraud and cheat them. Captain Scott issued his warrant, and yesterday Robinson alias Jonas arrived in Sydney.

William Smith was brought before the Court by constable O'Reilly, who yesterday forenoon took him into custody on the complaint of Rachel Albin, who was bleeding from a wound on her head, that he had assaulted her. Rachel Albin deposed that she lives in Dickson-street, with prisoner, and that yesterday forenoon they had words, when he broke up her child's barrow, and with a portion of it beat her; her head was cut, and her body is covered with bruises. Dr. Patterson dressed the wound on her head, and told her that the injuries on her breast will probably result in its loss. By his line of cross-examination Smith wished to show that Albin was drunk, which, however, she denied, and her denial was supported by the evidence of the constable. Their Worships found defendant guilty of an aggravated assault, and sentenced him to pay a penalty of £20, or to be imprisoned six months.

Andrew Smith was brought forward by constable Kelly, who deposed that, between eight and nine o'clock last evening, he took him into custody on Botany Road, for endangering the public safety by his furious driving of a horse and cart, several passengers having to run in order to get out of his way; he was drunk. To pay a penalty of £10, or to be imprisoned four months.

Jane Newman was summarily convicted of having stolen sundry articles of wearing apparel, valued at 30s., the property of Henry Greig, and was sentenced to be imprisoned seven days. A second sentence of seven days' imprisonment was passed for not satisfactorily accounting for a pair of boots found in her possession when apprehended for the larceny of wearing apparel.

WATER POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE the Water Police Magistrate and Mr. H. C. Russell.

Charles Rubin, seaman of the ship Sandringham, was sent to gaol for six weeks, on conviction of desertion.

William Marshall Selkirk appeared on summons charged with assaulting Thomas Barry. Defendant is chief officer of the ship Millwall, and plaintiff a seaman on board the same vessel. Barry stated that on Wednesday he went to defendant and asked him for the price of some tobacco, when defendant said he had no money. Yesterday morning Barry told defendant that he might have given him some money, and defendant then called him a whelp and a brat. Barry asserted himself to be a man, and might heave him (defendant) over the side. Defendant and the carpenter assisted by others, put Barry in irons, and this was the assault he complained of. The carpenter and steward of the ship deposed that Barry was very violent, and threatened to throw defendant overboard, and that he was put in irons to prevent violence; he was in irons only ten minutes. Case dismissed.

Roger M'Gillam, 55, was brought before the Court as a vagrant. Constable Birch stated that between eleven and twelve o'clock of yesterday forenoon he found prisoner wandering about William-street, and knowing him to be an idle and disorderly character, having no lawful visible means of support, he was locked up. Committed to one month's hard labour in gaol.

Thomas Hardwick was fined 40s., with costs, for using obscene language on the South Head Road. William Carlile, for a similar offence, was fined 20s., with costs.

Thomas Cunningham, cabman, was fined 10s., with costs, for being at such a distance from his vehicle as not to have control of the horses.

James O'Neil was charged with neglecting to keep clean certain premises belonging to him in George-street, thereby causing a nuisance by offensive smell. Fined 10s., with costs.

Charles Procter was charged with unlawfully feeding a horse in Crown-street, to the annoyance of the inhabitants of that thoroughfare. Fined 40s. with costs.

PUBLIC AMUSEMENTS.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.—The reproduction of Tom Taylor's clever drama, "The Ticket-of-leave Man," on Saturday evening last, with the circumstance of its being the occasion of Mr. Bartlett's benefit, attracted a dense audience at the Prince of Wales Theatre. This play, though presenting an incongruity in some of the characters, particularly that of Dalton, is a decided antidote to the immorality of that class of drama which elevates a scoundrel into a hero; as there is no sympathy whatever for the vagabonds who prey upon the public—but it is at the same time intended to illustrate the difficulty experienced by a man just discharged from prison in his endeavour to obtain a honest livelihood. It would have given greater force to the character of Brierly (the ticket-of-leave man) if, instead of being the dupe of bank-note forgers, and virtually innocent of the crime for which he was punished, he had been guilty, and thus more prominently urge that reformation is possible in a criminal if not prevented by society. Throughout the drama, the sympathies of the audience are enlisted for the foolish youth on the ground of his innocence, though it is evident Mr. Taylor is desirous of creating an interest in the reformation of the guilty convict. Herein, therefore, an evident inconsistency exists. The incorrigible forger and utterer Dalton, and the hoary decoy Moss, are, however, presented with remarkable truth to the originals, and exhibit that deformity of character and depravity which are always to be found in men who make crime the great object of their lives. Mr. Taylor has evidently no sympathy with convict hero-worship—and hence it presents a striking contrast to those infamous works which have elevated Jack Sheppard and Dick Turpin into heroes, and the pernicious influence of such insidious novels as Paul Clifford and Eugene Aram. The character of Brierly, a foolish young man with more money than wit, but learning wisdom by the most bitter experience, was touchingly developed by Mr. Charles Dillon. In the whirl of excitement in which Brierly is first seen—and in the reflections on a most terrible lesson he has received—Mr. Dillon was exceedingly good; his pathos, indeed, is great and affecting, and there is large scope for this display of his power. The scene with May Edwards in her humble but neat room was indeed very fine; and so was the emotion displayed when his master charges him with being a "ticket-man." The impression made on an audience must be judged at the time—not afterwards; and certainly no actor could have more thoroughly carried it away; though there were portions, perhaps, too lachrymose when the entire situation is considered; it is, however, almost hypercritical to say so. Mr. Bartlett's Dalton—the worst-drawn character in the play—was well sustained, the best portion being unquestionably that in the third act, at the bank; but forgers, generally, are not "locksmiths," and the attempt to take an impression of the key hole of the safe in which a large amount of money is placed, though necessary to the plot, is foreign to the usual practice of these gentry. The character of Moss, by Mr. Rogers, is a splendid piece of acting; and the personnel is striking without being extravagant. Who has not seen the Israelite fox in the streets of London, with a quasi-benevolent aspect, a tolerable suit of black, and brass buttons; sneaking servility of manner and apparent good-nature, covering the detestable calling of the "fence"—who makes robbery a profitable trade. Moss is not a Fagin—he moves in another sphere and operates on bills—dabbles in discounts—and sells bad notes, manufactured by others. These qualities are vividly drawn in the impersonation of Mr. Rogers. The next character of importance is that of May Edwards—a girl whom neither poverty nor flattery can debase—who is content with earning an honest living by labour, and is the means of rescuing Brierly from a downward course of crime after his release from Portland. This is a purely domestic character, of which there are many in the world unnoted by the ordinary observer, because they do not obtrude themselves on society. The character was beautifully represented by Miss Annie Lockhart, whose performance in this, as in every other part in which she appears, was marked with the genuine feeling that denotes the artist from the clap-trap declaimer—impressive and fervid in her delivery, she never once oversteps the modesty of true art. Policemen—and detectives in particular—are never popular, but Hawkshaw is a perfect hero with the audience; he certainly received the most enthusiastic applause accorded to any one of the characters, when he assists Brierly in his attempt to save the property of his late master, the banker, and secures the burglars. Mr. Burford played the character well, except that occasionally, and particularly in the last act, he was too demonstrative. London detectives are remarkable for their coolness under all circumstances. Mr. Walsh makes a good boniface, and kept up the character to the end. Mr. Manley as the kindly banker, Mr. Howard as Jones, and Miss Vernon as Mrs. Jones, were also creditable in their parts. Mr. Dillon and Mr. Bartlett were repeatedly called before the curtain. The afterpiece was a new farce by Charles Matthews, entitled "Little Toddlekins," which gives every opportunity for the loquacity of Bartlett, who as Brownsmith, keeps up a fusillade of talk for a good hour. There are many witticisms in the dialogue, some of which were appreciated, and some (not the worst) passed without notice. The farce is an excellent one, and Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Rogers are inimitable in their two characters. On Monday, the performances were for the benefit of Mrs. Charles Poole, when "As You Like It" and the "Jewess" were performed—the beneficiare appearing as Rosalind in the former, and the Jewess in the latter. Rosalind is not one of Mrs. Poole's best characters, and the play went somewhat tamely. In the "Jewess," however, Mrs. Poole appears to better advantage. On Tuesday, Mr. Charles Dillon appeared as Richelieu. The Duc de Richelieu is the most prominent character of the fifteenth century. He was remarkable for the development of great systems; and in striking at the territorial power of the nobility, he brought to the scaffold all, whether great or small, who stood in the line of his intent. He had with his strength many weaknesses, and both these elements of his character have been well defined in the play from the pen of Bulwer. He is not, however, presented in the zenith of his power or intellectual glory. Like the character of Wolsey, in Henry VIII., it is the later scenes of his important career that are chosen by the dramatist for the groundwork of the play. Richelieu's physical infirmity and dread of waning power are forcibly illustrated, though the mind seems as vigorous as in youth. Mr. Dillon's impersonation of the politic Cardinal was unquestionably fine, and marked with study. In England, he received very high encomium from the Press when he appeared in this part. Julie de Mortimer was also an excellent impersonation by Mrs. Dillon. "Little Toddlekins" concluded the entertainments. On Wednesday, the performances were for the benefit of Mr. Appleton, "The Lady of Lyons" and "Jonathan Bradford" formed the bill—the part of Claude Melnotte, in Bulwer's play, being sustained by the beneficiare. On Thursday, Mr. John Bryan took a benefit at the Prince of Wales, when "The Rent Day" and the "Wandering Minstrel" were produced, with a concert, the principal feature being the exquisite performance of the Lancashire Bell-ringers. Yesterday evening the "Gamester" was produced, Mr. Dillon appearing as Mr. Beverley, and Mrs. Dillon as Mrs. Beverley.

BENEFIT OF MRS. CHARLES DILLON.—This evening the performances at the Prince of Wales Theatre are for the benefit of Mrs. Charles Dillion, a very accomplished artist, whose performances in this city have always been received with delight. It is also to be a farewell appeal to the patrons of the drama,—and it may fairly be presumed that Mrs. Dillon's claims will be recognised by the presence of a large audience. The pieces selected for the occasion are "The Cavalier" and "The Ticket-of-Leave Man."

BURTON'S NATIONAL CIRCUS.—Mr. Burton continues to provide an attractive bill of fare to that section of the community who admire daring feats of horsemanship, athletic power, and agility, acrobatic skill, the intelligence of horses, dogs, and monkeys, when developed by careful and patient training, and those moreover who have retained the feelings of their youth sufficiently to enjoy the fun and frolic of a good clown. There has recently been a change of programme and throughout the week, with the exception of yesterday evening when no one save a few homeless wanderers could be expected to leave their dwellings for the theatre, so desperately bad was the weather, the house has been well filled. Such a skilful troupe as Mr. Burton has collected could not fail to attract the public in any large centre of population; but in these colonies the kind of entertainment provided every evening at the Victoria Theatre is peculiarly acceptable. The youthful portion of the audience are enthusiastic in their admiration of young Waterland in his riding—both the pony and the horse; and young Rudolph in the varied performances which he undertakes; and certainly the skill displayed by both is very great. Others are loud in their applause of Mr. Gilham in his equestrian performances; while the beautiful pony Beeswing, together with the dogs and monkeys, have a large number of admirers. Mr. Jerry Blossom, with his whimsicalities and songs, and Monsieur Kiser, on the trapeze, must not be overlooked. Each is admirable in his respective forte, and they fully merit the large share of attention they receive. On Tuesday last, Mr. George Gilham, undoubtedly the best horseman of the entire troupe, took a benefit, when the house was full to overflowing. Another morning performance is announced for to-day, and, should the weather improve, there will, doubtless, be a full house, as there has been on previous occasions. Bartine, whose performance on the flying trapeze was much admired when he was in Sydney some two years ago, is announced to appear for six nights.

THE LANCASHIRE BELLRINGERS.—The Bellringers have terminated their performances at the School of Arts, and are giving a series of entertainments in the suburbs, assisted by the vocalisation of that excellent tenor Mr. Charles Stewart, and Miss Harriet Gordon. This evening they are announced to appear at the School of Arts, Balmain; and from the well-known musical taste of our friends "over the water," and the liberal patronage they invariably give to musical and literary entertainments, it is pretty certain these clever ringers will be well patronised, particularly as they are so soon to leave Australia.

The auctioneers particularly request the attention of the trade to this cargo, being the first shipment of heavy timber ever received direct from the Baltic; it comprises 154 pieces, the sizes of a few only of which are given above. The detailed list of sizes, quantities, &c., can be had on application to the auctioneers, at their Rooms, 362, George-street. It will be seen that, in addition to the deals generally imported, there are in this cargo many pieces of Baltic timber well suited for spars, and adapted for cutting into beams, joists, or for any other use where the well-known durability of the Norway pine would render it of great value.

The sale of this choice shipment of Moulmein teak timber should command the attention of shipowners, timber merchants, coach builders, cabinet makers, and all persons requiring a really sound durable wood, it is needless to enlarge upon the many desirable qualities it possesses, as although teak timber has hitherto rarely been brought into this market, it is universally known and esteemed as one of the most valuable descriptions of wood in use, the "Moulmein teak" is especially in favour in Europe and in the Indian markets. It is light, easily worked, very durable, and possesses the rare quality of being impervious to corrosion from rust. The present shipment is the first parcel of Moulmein teak ever offered for sale in the colony. It has been chosen with due regard to the requirements of this market, and with especial care that none but timber of the best quality should be shipped. The sale being unreserved, offers to ship builders and others an opportunity of purchasing such as is seldom to be met with, and which it would be unwise to neglect.

The undermentioned well-known VERY VALUABLE SHEEP AND CATTLE PROPERTIES.
1. TULCUMBAH AND WEETALIBAH OR BURRELL RUNS. TULCUMBAH is situate at the junction of the rivers Peel and Namoi, and has a frontage of 5 miles to the right bank of the Peel, and 4 miles to the left and 8 miles to the right bank of the Namoi, in all about 17 MILES RIVER FRONTAGE.
It extends back over 30 miles, and the back country is intersected by the Borah Creek, which runs through it for about 15 miles, as also several other creeks; together with numerous permanent springs dispersed over the back run, affording an abundant supply of water. It consists of plains (one of which, TULCUMBAH PLAIN, IS FIFTEEN MILES LONG), MYALL and box flats, and fine open box ridges, and is beyond doubt one of the most valuable fattening runs on the Namoi River, capable of
DEPASTURING 25,000 SHEEP AND 2000 CATTLE
WEETALIBAH or BURRELL RUN, adjoins Tulcumbah, and has about 10 MILES FRONTAGE TO THE NAMOI RIVER, and extends back about 8 miles. It also consists of plains, myall and box flats and box forest, and is famous for the very large per-centage of fat stock sent to market off it. It is capable of DEPASTURING 12,000 SHEEP, OR 4000 CATTLE.
In addition to the river frontage, Weetalibah is watered by a back creek, and springs and several permanent lagoons.
IMPROVEMENTS.—Upon Tulcumbah there are the following:—Cottage and kitchen, &c., quite new; store, men's huts, and blacksmith's forge. Also a large stockyard (new), a large woolshed roofed with iron (new), and an extensive horse paddock. There are seven out-stations, with huts and yards, and three never-failing wells about 5 miles apart; also troughs for watering 3000 sheep laid on to a permanent and copious spring.
Upon Weetalibah there is a substantial cottage residence, with kitchen, wash-house, and coach-house; also, men's huts, garden well stocked with fruit trees, a newly enclosed three-rail paddock, and very large and complete stockyards capable of holding 7000 head of cattle.
 All these improvements are in thorough repair and erected beyond the reach of all floods.
With Tulcumbah and Weetalibah will be sold the following stock:—
SHEEP, as per returns of 30th April—
EWES.—1153, more or less, weaners, 7 months old
2084, more or less, 1½ to 4½ years
1559, more or less, 5 years and upwards
WETHERS.—1169, more or less, weaners, 7 months old
1679, more or less, 1½ to 3½ years
48 rams
Total.. 7692, more or less.
Together with
5000 HEAD OF CATTLE, more or less.
These cattle are well bred. The herd has been regularly attended to, and culled of all inferior stock for many years past. There are a fair proportion of speyed cows, and as no fat cattle have been taken for some time past, the purchaser may rely upon a draft at once.
☞ Tulcumbah and Weetalibah runs are too well known to need any lengthened comment. They are surrounded by the following first-class properties:—Carroll, Gunnedah, Burburgate, Burnidi, Barrabbas, Manilla, and Keepit. Formerly they were separate properties, but, worked together as they have been by the late proprietor, they form one of THE MOST EXTENSIVE AND VALUABLE PASTORAL PROPERTIES in the Liverpool Plains district.
 Stores, stock horses, teams, drays, and implements of all kinds to be taken at a valuation.
2. THE WYABERRY or GEERAH, and the MARRA CREEK Runs, comprising the following blocks:—
WYABERRY
WILLOI and BACK WILLOI
ULOURI and BACK ULOURI
GINGE and BACK GINGE.
The whole of these adjoin and form a splendid tract of country, of THE MOST FATTENING DESCRIPTION,
abounding in MYALL and SALT BUSH, and grasses and herbs of the richest kind.
They are immediately opposite to the Messrs. White's stations, Booroema and Brewan, and have a frontage of about 16 MILES TO THE BARWAN RIVER, and 20 MILES TO THE MARRA CREEK, which latter forms the western boundary of the whole. They are also intersected by the Ginge Creek.
These runs are capable of
DEPASTURING 8000 CATTLE IN ALL SEASONS.
THE IMPROVEMENTS, which are on the Marra Creek, about 10 miles back from the river, are a cottage residence, a large stockyard 32 panels square, capable of drafting four ways, also a small yard for horses, with milking bails, and killing yards.
With the Wyaberry runs will be sold
[illegible]00 HEAD OF WELL-BRED CATTLE, more or less.
 A splendid draft of fat cattle now ready for market.
Stores, horses, drays, teams, implements, &c., to be taken at a valuation.
☞ The Wyaberry runs are about 65 miles below the junction of the Namoi and Barwin, on the left bank of the latter river. The Darling River steamers have been higher up than these runs, and supplies have been obtained from them at a very cheap rate, thus avoiding the tedium and expense of long land-carriage. They are in every respect FIRST-CLASS FATTENING RUNS.
 Intending purchasers are invited to inspect these properties, which are in the market for bona fide sale. Any other particulars that may be required can be had by applying to Messrs. MORT and CO., Pitt-street, Sydney; or to CHARLES PARNELL, Esq., Osterly, Hunter River.
SKETCHES of the runs may be seen at the Rooms, Pitt-street.

These improvements are on Cumbadello; on Minne Minnane a hut and weaning yard.
The auctioneer particularly invites intending purchasers to inspect the runs and stock prior to day of sale, feeling satisfied that the quality of the herd, the extent and fattening capabilities of the runs—the country being well watered and adapted for both cattle and sheep—cannot fail to impress upon intending purchasers that this important squatting property, possessing so many advantages, offers an investment to be perhaps equalled, but not excelled in the colony, more especially as the sale is peremptory and unreserved.
The auctioneer will have much pleasure in supplying any information in his power.

The amount of gold coin issued by the Sydney branch of the Royal Mint during the week ended to-day, July 15th, has been 35,000 sovereigns.

The quantity of gold-dust imported into the same establishment during the week for the purpose of coinage has been 12,089 ounces.

The share market has exhibited rather more activity this week, but the transactions have not been to any amount. The fluctuations that have taken place are as follows:—Bank of New South Wales, and Commercial Bank shares are steady at quotations; Union Bank shares are firmer, and have improved 20s. per share on list sale; City Bank shares are not quite so firm, and have declined 2s. 6d. per share since their meeting. Steam shares continue very dull of sale. A forced sale of a small lot of Australasian Steam Navigation new shares has been made at a decline of 20s. per share; the old shares are also offered at reduced rates. Hunter River New Steam Navigation shares have declined 10s. per share. Illawarra Steam Navigation shares are unaltered. Insurance shares are in greater request. Business during the week has been quiet, and with the exception of one or two large sales by auction and privately, the transactions have not been of any moment. The news from England has not yet affected our markets, speculators being indisposed to operate until they are in receipt of their advices. The flour market is firm, notwithstanding the arrival of the Lockett with a large cargo of breadstuffs. The news from California was anticipated by the Amateur, therefore prices have not been affected. We have heard of small sales at £28 per ton. Wheat is quoted at 12s., and a large parcel of Californian is reported to have been sold at 11s. In liquids there has not been much doing, and prices rule about the same as last week. Sugars are firmer, and both at auction and privately have realised improved rates. Teas are also very firm, and holders are still anticipating higher prices. Rice is firm, and sales of Patna have been made at £22 per ton. Candles are very dull of sale. The Neva Stearine Company of St. Petersburg have reduced the price of their candles to 11d. per lb.

Messrs. Mort and Co. catalogued to-day 48 casks of tallow, but only sold 19. The inclemency of the weather interfered to a certain extent with the sale; but the news from England of lower rates also checked buyers from operating. The prices obtained ranged from 25s. 3d. to 30s. per cwt. They also sold 34 hides at 9s. each, and 60 calfskins at 1s. 10d. each.

Messrs. Durham and Irwin held their usual sale of tallow, hides, and leather, this day.

Tallow.—120 casks were submitted, and about 113 sold. The prices ruled lower than those of last week. Boiling down parcels were taken at from £29 to £29 7s 6d; station at from £24 5s to £27 5s per ton. Hides: about 900 were brought forward, half of which were sold. Extra heavies realised from 15s 3d to 16s; heavy at 12s; medium at 8s 6d to 11s 9d each. Leather: Kip at 15d per lb.

Mr. O. B. Ebsworth sold to-day by auction 16 casks of tallow at 27s. 6d. per cwt., and 142 hides at 7s. to 16s. 3d. each.

Messrs. Threlkeld and Co. held an important sale of Eastern produce, Mauritius sugar, oilmen's stores, at their Rooms, City Mart, on Wednesday last, which attracted a large attendance of buyers. The cargo of Java produce ex Leonidas, was placed at the following rates:—

COMMERCIAL.

STOCK AND SHARE CIRCULARS.

W. BARTON.—There has been some activity in the share market this week, and sales to a fair amount have taken place. The fluctuations are as follows:—City Bank shares have declined 2s 6d per share, and Union Bank shares have advanced 20s per share. A small sale of the new shares of the Australasian Steam Navigation Company was made at a considerable decline on last quotations. Hunter River Steam have also declined 10s per share. The following companies have held their half-yearly meetings:—City Bank, on the 12th instant. The gross profits for the half-year were £11,161 6s 11d. After payment of current expenses, rebate on bills, &c, the sum of £500 was set aside for the commencement of a reserve fund, and £635 11s 2d was carried to the credit of profit and loss. The Pacific Fire and Marine Insurance Company, on the 13th instant. The gross premiums for the half-year amounted to £10,787 13s 4d. A dividend at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum was declared, and the reserve fund was increased by the sum of £7500, and now amounts to £27,500. Since the meeting these shares have been inquired for at the same price they were selling at with the dividend. My sales have been—Bank of New South Wales, £42 10s per share, new shares, £41 10s; Union Bank, £49; City Bank, £10 15s and £10 12s 6d; Australian Steam (new shares), £21; Hunter River New Steam, £15; United Fire and Marine Insurance, 27s 6d.—July 15th.

LENNON AND CAPE.—We notice a slight improvement in our share market this week; we have had a little more inquiry for those shares that are at present ruling low in the market. The City Bank and Pacific Fire and Marine Insurance Co.'s have had their half-yearly meetings. The latter company declared a dividend at the rate of 20 per cent per annum, added £7500 to the reserve fund and carried forward £1047 18s 6d of undivided profits. Our sales during the week have been in Bank of New South Wales, £43; Commercial Bank, £54; Union Bank, £49; City Bank, £10 15s; Hunter River New Steam, £15; Illawarra Steam, £3 17s 6d; Sydney Fire Insurance, £3 10s; United Fire and Marine Insurance, £1 7s 6d.

J. MULLENS.—I have done but a moderate business this week, nor do I expect any material improvement until the half-yearly meetings are over. The meetings held this week have been those of the City Bank, at which a progress report was presented, showing a very fair prospect for the future; the Pacific Insurance Co., when the usual dividend of 20 per cent was declared, and the satisfactory sum of £7500 was added to the reserve fund; and the Illawarra Steam Co, at which it was resolved to make a call of £1 per share when required. The only changes of price have been in Australasian steam shares, which I have sold at £21 for new shares fully paid up, and in Pacific Insurance shares, which have been sold at £5 ex dividend. My sales this week have been—Bank of New South Wales shares, at £42 15s and £43; Australasian Steam shares (new), at £21; Illawarra Steam shares, at £3 17s 6d; New South Wales Marine shares, at £3 7s 6d; United Insurance shares, at £1 7s 6d; New South Wales Government debentures, 1876 and 1891, at par and interest; Australasian Steam debentures, 1869, at 101½ and interest.—July 15.

W. CHATFIELD.—I am not able to report any improvement in the share market, which still continues inactive. Bank stock is firm, but holders are not disposed to sell at current rates. Insurance, steam, and mining stock are not much in demand, but there was some little inquiry for Pacifics after the publication of the half-yearly report of that company. My sales have been—Bank of New South Wales, at £42 15s and £41 15s; Australian Joint Stock Bank, at £14; Peak Downs Copper, at £1; Colonial Sugar Refining Company's Debentures, bearing 7 per cent., at 10s premium and accrued interest.—July 15.

PRODUCE, STOCK, AND STATION CIRCULARS.

MORT AND CO.—Wool: The recent intelligence by telegram of the advance in the London May sales of this staple has had the effect of strengthening the market here, and consequently prices ruled a shade higher at yesterday's sales. No corresponding advance with that reported at home can, however, be looked for here, as the English news by the April mail was of so favourable a character as to cause operations in this market during the past month to be made in anticipation of the results confirmed by these telegrams. We catalogued 149 bales for yesterday's sale, and sold 132. For particulars see at foot. Sheepskins: We offered over 6000, and quitted the whole. Prices ranged from 6¼d to 9½d; one lot of lambskins brought 11d. Tallow: Owing to the very inclement state of the weather we only offered a portion of our catalogue this morning; prices may be quoted the same as last week. Hides: For the same reason we also passed the whole of the hides, but one lot of medium light weights, which brought 9s. Prices Current—Wool: Superior clips 1s 6d to 1s 10d, fair to good 1s 3d to 1s 6d, low to middling 1s 1d to 1s 3d, grease 6¼d to 11½d, scoured 1s 6d to 2s 2d. Tallow: Beef £29 10s to £30, hides 7s to 16s each, sheepskins 6¼d to 9½d lb. O. B. EBSWORTH.—Wool.—The announcement by telegram that the English May sales had opened at an advance of about 1d per lb. on English wools was received with much satisfaction, and at auction to-day it had the effect of causing the prices of all descriptions to advance about one halfpenny to 1d per lb., the latter price only on wools free from seed. Greasy wools were in better demand, and all offering brought increased rates to what could have been obtained last week. When the correspondence is delivered a more detailed account of the market will be given. Sheepskins.—Some really superior skins were offered to-day and brought a corresponding price, but ordinary and short-woolled did not advance beyond ½d per lb. Tallow: This market is depressed at home, and lower prices for shipment must rule. Hides: Extra weights, selected, still find favour with the tanners, both in Sydney and the neighbouring colonies, and top prices continue to be paid for such. Good shipping parcels are in demand at proportionate rates, but wormeaten and station are not much sought after. Wool: TT, all faults, 8bales, at 9d; TT, ditto, 18, at 8¼d; TT, 2, at 6¼d; W, grease, 14, at 10¼d. Sheepskins: W, 4 bundles at 7¼d; TR, 3 bales at 7¼d. Tallow:—L, 16 casks at 27s 6d. Hides: 20 at 16s 6d, MT, 40 at 7s, MD over diamond, 54 at 9s 6d, 28 at 16s 3d.—July 15.

DURHAM AND IRWIN.—Wool.—The catalogues for the public sales of this week comprised 285 bales, of which about 269 were disposed of at a slight advance on the rates ruling prior to the arrival of the mail telegram. Throughout the sales there was a desire on the part of purchasers to operate at full rates, but it would be premature to state that any advance in price had been established. Our sales of yesterday were as follows:—Greasy, UW, 1 bale at 13d; mixed ditto, 1 at 13¼d; greasy, H&W, 3 at 8d; fleece ditto, 7 at 7¼d; ditto, JT conjoined, 13 at 18¼d; locks, 2 at 12d; greasy, MD over C in diamond, 6 at 8¼d per lb. Sheepskins: Sales went off well, prices obtained being fully up to previous quotations, viz:—JF, 1 lot at 7d; EH, 1 bundle at 7¼d; C&H, 1 lot at 7¼d per lb. Tallow: This class of produce is depressed, and prices have ruled lower. Boiling parcels show a decline of about 10s per ton. 120 casks were catalogued for our sale this day, and 113 were sold as follows:—H, 1 cask at 25s 6d; FH, 2 ditto at 26s, 2 ditto at 26s 3d; FWCH, 20 ditto at 29s; Collingwood, 29 ditto at 29s 4½d; WN, 1 ditto at 26s 3d; L, 1 ditto at 26s 3d; B, 4 ditto at 25s 6d; M'D, 2 ditto at 25s 6d; D, 2 ditto at 24s 3d; HBB, 1 ditto at 25s; E over N, 1 ditto at 27s 3d; N over N, 31 ditto at 29s 1½d; O over N, 27 ditto at 29s 1½d; F, 12 paunches at 24s 3d per cwt. Hides: The sales of this day were effected with difficulty, buyers being anxious for lower rates, but on the whole prices obtained were equal to those of last week's sales. For our sale this day, over 900 were brought forward, about one half of which were sold; three parcels realised as follows:—Collingwood, at 15s 3d; Nott, at 16s; GUG, at 16s. Prices throughout ranged thus:—2 at 4s 6d, 38 at 11s 9d, 43 at 16s, 13 at 16s, 42 at 8s 6d, 10 at 15s 3d, 83 at 10s 3d, 50 at 12s each. Leather: 7 bundles kip at 15d. Hair, at 5¼d per lb. Shank Bones, &c., £7 17s 6d per ton.—15th July.

THOMAS DAWSON.—Fat Cattle: The upward tendency in this market, reported last week, has been fully confirmed. Prime bullocks are worth £4 to £4 10s; second class, from £3 to £4 10s. I have sold 100 head of Chisholm's at £3 10s, delivery taken on the station.—Fat Sheep: This market is firm, and prices decidedly better. If the wet weather continue, it must have a material influence on sales, as also must the increased price of beef, the lowness of which has greatly depressed the sheep market for some time past.—Store Cattle and Sheep. Very few inquiries and but little business doing in these descriptions of stock. The demand for cattle for delivery in Gipps Land still continues, but no transactions can be quoted.—Horses: This market remains as last reported.—Milch Cows: Remain at last quotations. Prime are in demand at £5 to £8; for inferior, prices are merely nominal.—15th July.

J. BREWSTER.—Stations: I have had several inquiries during the week for sheep country in Queensland, lightly stocked. Stations of this class, situated on the Comet or Nogoa, would sell readily. Store Cattle: There is not much doing at present. I have buyers for large herds of mixed cattle delivered in the spring. Store Sheep: There are buyers for large lots of ewes or mixed sheep for delivery either at once or after shearing. I have placed several lots under offer. Quotations for sheep in Queensland are as under—maiden ewes 16s, 3 to 5 years old ewes 14s, aged ditto 12s, mixed weaners 12s, wethers 8s. In New South Wales good store wethers are worth 9s to 9s 6d. I have concluded some sales of wethers during the week at the latter price from western stations.—15th July.

R. FORBES.—Since my last I have to report the sale of Bringagee in my hands for sale, on the Murrumbidgee River, with 27,000 sheep, for the sum of £38,000; this is equal in amount to rather over 28s per head. Store Cattle: I have sold 500 bullocks at 45s cash, delivered near Hay, on the Murrumbidgee River. Store Sheep: I have disposed of during the week, the following lots, to different buyers, from the flocks of Queensland stations: say 1500 six-toothed ewes, at 12s; 10,000 wethers, ages 3 to 5, at 8s; 250 female weaner sheep, at 12s; and 5000 mixed weaners. Also 250 aged ewes, but none broken mouthed, at 12s per head. In all 17,000 head.

PITT AND SULLIVAN.—We have to report an improvement in the fat cattle market, and any really good in demand, and realise fair rates. We have sold one lot of B. O'Mullens, Esq's, 193 head, at £4 7s 6d each. We quote quality worth from £4 to £5; middling, all prices, according to quality. We have sold since our last report—136 of Forrester's, at £2 12s; 66 ditto, boilers, at £1 15s; 190 of Lloyd's, £3 6s; 81 of Cornish's, boilers, £1 15s; 106 of Hughes', £3 2s; 200 of Gardiner's, £2 15s; 120 of M'Culloch's, £3 3s; 183 of O'Mullens', £4 7s 6d each. Fat Sheep: Market steady at former quotations. We quote best wethers worth 15s to 16s each. We have sold this week 630 of Freeman's, at 10s; 600 of M'Culloch's, at 12s.—15th July.

LEATHER REPORT.

W. DEAN.—Since my last report there has been nothing to call for especial notice. I have sold large parcels at the following rates:—Kip, 1s 3d to 1s 6d; sole, 8d to 9½d; one inferior parcel, damaged, at 7½d; harness, 9½d to 11½d; bag, 10s to 13s; collar, 4s to 7s; bridle, 12s to 14s; basils, 7s to 12s; calf, 2s 3d to 2s 9d; yearlings, 2s to 2s 3d; kangaroo, 21s to 23s; English calf, 3s 3d to 3s 6d; French, 4s to 4s 6d.—July 15th.

HORSE MARKET.

MR. CHARLES MARTYN reports: The week's sales are unimportant, having been restricted to a few small drafts, the majority of which were light and weedy stock. Some medium draught horses were purchased for the Queensland market, but the demand for that place has considerably diminished.

MESSRS. BURT and Co. report a slight improvement this week. Transactions, though still limited, have been more satisfactory. Our sales at the bazaar, in the early part of the week, were well attended, and serviceable stock of all kinds met with purchasers at fair prices. One lot from Wollongong realised from £10 5s. to £30; a pair from the Terara stud, £70; and four young horses from Kiama changed hands, at an average of £15; other stock fetching according to value. Small animals out of condition unsaleable.
